New flood plain maps

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

New flood plain maps prepared by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers apparently will have an impact on future development in Virginia Beach. The extent of that impact will depend on the action City Council will take in making changes in its flood plain ordinances in respect to the updated information.

The maps show that since 1969 when the Corps last made a study of the flood plain the plain has expanded into areas which are developable under the current ordinance, but would no longer be capable of development with the new maps used as guidelines.

Carl Thoren, assistant engineer in the Department of Public Works, Monday afternoon at a Council work session, presented six of approximately 100 maps covering all parts of the city in the updated Corps study.

He said that there are some changes in the flood plain elevations as a result of growth and development in the city. He said the elevations varied from none in the West Landing Road-West Neck Road - Princess Anne Road area in the south end of the city to increasingly higher elevations northward. The area where no changes have occurred in elevations since 1969 have a fairly open, wide body of water which can receive the storm water runoff. In more highly developed areas to the north elevations have increased forcing the water to drain over a wider area.

The reference point for the maps is the 100-year flood plain, that is, what can be expected as the result of a storm which occurs once in 100 years.

The new maps will become official in six to nine months. In the meantime, Council directed the city staff to use the new maps for the development review process. Anything else, with the new information available, "would be a disgrace," said Council John A. Baum.

The only alternatives the city has, according to City Engineer John Herzke, is to use the old maps as long as it can (that is, until the new ones are official) "which will give me pangs of conscience," or use the new maps. The old maps must be used in relation to flood plain insurance, however, until the new maps are official, he said.

If the new maps are used with restrictions delineated in the current ordinance, tracts of land which would now be de-

Condemned rapist sits

While receiving sentence, felon sits; then attacks

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

Was Pat Mills, a five-year Virginia Beach court docket who was present recently when a convicted rapist attacked a city prosecutor, scared when it happened?

"Honestly? Yes," she said. "More frightened afterwards when I realized what happened. During the whole thing your adrenalin starts going."

It was as Judge Austin E. Owen was passing a life sentence with no parole when Michael Sewell Smith suddenly flew out of his seat and attacked prosecuting attorney Kenneth A. Phillips.

"The judge was not finished with the sentencing when he burst up from his chair," Mills said, "knocked the conference table over and the deputies backwards, ran around his conference table, dove over the commonwealth attorney's table and knocked Ken Phillips flat. He dove directly at Ken."

Smith's outburst came after he realized he would never be eligible for parole, because of his specific multiple convictions under Virginia law. In the ensuing melee, Smith's family became involved with the scuffle, requiring the efforts of the court bailiff, three deputies and two off-duty law enforcement officers to restore order.

Mills, who is the wife of Virginia Beach attorney K. Lane Mills, said there was no way to expect the storm

"During the sentencing he did something most unusual. He sat down. And when you're being sentenced you stand up there and face the judge. When he sat down, first two deputies and then three tried to pry him out of the chair, but they couldn't." - Court Docket Pat Mills which recently befell the courtroom. But Smith did act out-of-the-norm.

"During the sentencing he did something most unusual," Mills observed. "He sat down. And when you're being sentenced you stand up there and face the judge. When he sat down, first two deputies and then three tried to pry him out of the chair, but they couldn't."

"Judge Owen could have easily charged him with contempt," Mills continued. "But I felt Judge Owen showed admirable qualities when he just continued in a quiet voice to finish the sentence so that it would be

'Students behaved beautifully'

Seniors remain calm; impressed that no fists flew

For the 28 seniors who were in court on the day the prosecutor was attacked, the incident had positive and negative aspects.

"It was a real experience of the criminal element," said Pat Mills, scheduling coordinator of the city's Court Docket program. "They could see the kind of violence that can occur in a crime that most of us, hopefully, will never be subjected to. We hear about the murders and the rapes and here we are sitting in a courtroom. It's a terrifying experience to watch someone simply go berserk. He was emotionally out of control."

Several minutes elapsed between the time Michael Sewell Smith attacked Ken Phillips and when the students were ushered from the court. Afterwards, several students were upset but in general Mills said the ordeal was a positive learning experience for the students.

"Of course we don't want to expose them to danger," she said, "and I do not feel they were in danger this time. I think that overall this was a positive experience for them. For most of them this is their first time in a courtroom and they can see how justice works."

When the disruption occurred, Mills, along with docket director Mrs. Rice M. Youell, directed their attention to the students and not the spectacle.

"My immediate reaction was my responsibility for those students," she said. "Liz and I reacted immediately and we did the exact same thing together: we turned to our students and we began to talk to them. We said, 'sit quietly, be calm and we will be told when we can leave.'"

After the subject had been subdued, court bailiff Tom Rollins instructed the doctents to take the students from court.

He said, "OK, now we're going to get the students out of here," Mills said. "That was the signal for Liz and I to turn to our students and get them up."

The students behaved as instructed.

"The students behaved just beautifully," Mills said. "They obeyed everything we said. They moved out. Nobody jumped up and said anything. None of them were hysterical or anything like that."

Mills champions the docket program and said the incident strengthens the program.

"The judicial system doesn't just punish people, it protects innocent people. And unfortunately, this was a very vivid example. I'm sorry they had to see so much violence. But they did learn that sometimes it is important. Someone must be incarcerated in order to protect that person and to protect people in society." - Court Docket Pat Mills

"One of the reasons why we take them down there is to teach them about the legal process and that it works both ways," she said. "The judicial system doesn't just punish people; it protects innocent people. And unfortunately, this was a very vivid example. I'm sorry they had to see so much violence. But they did learn that sometimes it is important. Someone must be incarcerated in order to protect that person and to protect people in society."

Mills and the students were impressed by how the court officers subdued the man without striking him.

"I think that impressed the students," she said. "There was never any hitting or slugging going on. There were several deputies who surrounded him and pulled him down to the floor in, shall we say, a humane manner. There was no roughhousing. They were not trying to beat up on him in any way."

The students were eventually calmed by Judge Ken Whitehurst, who led the students after the incident to his court and talked with them for about 30 minutes.

First citizens wanted

Bruce McKenna, chairman of the 1984 First Citizen's Committee for the Virginia Beach Jaycees, has announced that the Jaycees are now accepting nominations for the Thirty-fourth Annual First Citizen of Virginia Beach Award.

The First Citizen's Award is perhaps the most prestigious award given to a Virginia Beach citizen. It is presented to the individual who has made outstanding contributions in their profession and who has unselfishly devoted their time and energies in service to their community. The recipient of last year's award was Dr. Edward E. Brickell, recognized for his leadership as the city's Superintendent of Schools in providing for high-quality public education for Virginia Beach primary and secondary school students.

Following the difficult task of selection, the Jaycees sponsor a banquet in the recipient's honor. This year's banquet will be held in early May, 1984. The keynote address will be presented by the Honorable A. Joe Canada, Virginia State Senator.

An eyeful

The main reason why the recent incident in the circuit court has received the attention it has, is because there were 28 seniors in the gallery. These weren't just any seniors. These were ones who had been specially briefed and prepared on what to expect in court.

The court docents want to make the public understand that the students weren't there on a whim and saw a fluke situation.

The students were courtroom oriented and what they witnessed will not be something they may easily forget.

No matter how the situation ended, it did seem to be touch and go for a while. Luckily, no one was injured. But given the situation, anything could have happened. Just be thankful the main thing the students derived from the ordeal was an eyeful.

Boxing camp

Given what is publicly known, it's ashamed Virginia Beach is going to lose the Ali boxing camp which had been planned on a 144-acre site in rural Virginia Beach.

But civic opposition has apparently convinced Ali and his lawyer that this city may not be the best location for a boxing camp to train some of this country's upcoming prize fighters.

In print, Ali's lawyer said the change in Ali's plan was primarily the result of opposition from one city councilwoman. Whether or not she was 100% for or against it, it seems a little unlikely that one person's opinion could have caused the change in venue. But, there was opposition from those residents who want to keep most future growth for as long as they can in the city's northern half. That's fine. But while they're preserving, what's the city losing?

Tribble on issues

The Senate has adopted a comprehensive crime package which includes capital punishment. As a former state and federal prosecutor, I am convinced of the need for capital punishment. I joined with my colleagues in voting to establish a constitutional procedure to impose capital punishment for certain federal crimes. Capital punishment would be used for convictions of murder, treason, espionage and the assassination of the President.

I am convinced there are certain crimes that are premeditated and cold bloodedly executed for which capital punishment is an appropriate sanction and a substantial deterrent.

Innocent society has a right—indeed a responsibility—to protect itself from criminal violence.

Lebanon

Regrettably, the situation in Lebanon has fallen apart and I agree with President Reagan's move to withdraw our Marines. We should redeploy our forces as soon as possible. I might add that I had serious reservations about deploying Marines in Lebanon from the outset.

I believe our objectives in Lebanon were worth pursuing. Surely, peace and stability in the Middle East are important to every American. However, I was concerned that we were deploying too few Marines to keep the peace and far too many to die.

The United States has lost most of its leverage in Lebanon and events will be largely dictated by the Syrians. My hope is that the Soviets and Syrians will show some restraint and not force a confrontation with the Israelis. Absent Syrian annexation of Lebanon, we will see a partitioned Lebanon where the Druse and Christians and Moslems control parts of the country. Syria occupies about one-third of Lebanon and the Israelis control their northern border.

As Americans, we must recognize that there are no easy answers to the problems we face. However, as a great nation America has great responsibilities around the world. Our vital interests require that we play a part in what goes on. We must always use our influence to promote the cause of peace and stability and freedom.

Delegate's report

McClanan sponsors energy conservation law

Delegate Glenn McClanan has sponsored legislation that provide that electric utility advertising cannot be passed on to the consumer unless it promotes conservation or a more efficient use of energy, or is required by some regulation or law.

Upon passage, this will mean that at least $1 million dollars of Vepco advertising in 1984 will not be passed on to its customers. An example of this kind of advertising that would have to be paid for by the stockholders, and not the rate payers, is the $600,000 contribution made by Vepco in 1983 to the Committee for Energy Awareness, in Washington, as a part of its $25 million advertising campaign to promote the use of nuclear power for the production of electricity. The legislation does not in any way restrict the kind of advertising that a utility can use with stockholders paying for it. It only limits the type that the utility can require the customers to pay for.

Delegate McClanan has also introduced legislation ending the 150 day limit that the State Corporation Commission has to decide rate cases. On August 28, 1983, at the end of a 150 day period, a temporary rate increase was granted to Vepco in the amount of $81.1 million. Subsequently, on December 1, 1983, the S.C.C. rejected three-fourths of the amount, allowing only a $20.6 million increase. Customers were required to pay $19 million in extra utility bills temporarily because of this law, that was ultimately ordered to be refunded.

Delegate McClanan said he feels the S.C.C. acts expeditiously on all petitions that are filed. However, he thinks there is little evidence to support the proposition that the S.C.C. has unfairly delayed action on any rate increase application filed by any utility in Virginia. McClanan also said he feels that as long as the S.C.C. acts expeditiously, they should be given the time necessary to investigate and decide complex issues in a manner that will provide maximum fairness to both the consumer and the utility. This legislation is being studied during 1984.

Tips for reporting tips

By Harvey J. Ridinger
Field Representative
Social Security Administration

Some people who receive cash tips in their work confuse reporting for income tax purposes with reporting for Social Security purposes.

The Internal Revenue Service requirement is simple: All tips must be reported as income and are subject to Federal income tax; however, the receipt of tips is handled differently for Social Security purposes.

Cash tips must be reported by a worker to his or her employer if they amount to at least $20 in a month. A person who works for more than one employer during a month must report separately to each. If tips are shared with other employees, only the amount actually received must be reported.

In addition to tips of less than $20 a month, other exceptions also apply. Tips in the form of merchandise (such as tickets to a show) should not be reported, nor should the employee's share of a service charge imposed on customers. These charges will be reported as regular wages.

The employer collects from each employee who receives tips his or her share of the Social Security tax due. This amount may be deducted from wages due the employee or from money given the employer by the employee for this purpose. The amount to be paid to the employer depends on the amount earned.

For 1984, a worker in Social Security-covered employment pays an effective rate of 6.7 percent on earnings up to $37,800, whether regular wages or tips.

The report to the employer is due by the 10th of the month following the month the tips were earned. If the 10th of the month falls on a weekend or holiday, the report should be made by the next workday.

For reporting tip income to your employer you must use IRS form 4070 or you can devise your own form as long as it contains the same information as the IRS form. Your employer reports both your wages and tips to the Social Security Administration, where they are credited to your earnings record. At the end of the year, your employer must give you a W-2 form, which shows your wages, the tips you reported, and any uncollected Social Security tax due on reported tips.

For more information contact any Social Security office. The Norfolk office is located at 200 Granby Mall in the Federal Building. The Virginia Beach office is located at 328 Constitution Drive, across from Pembroke Mall. The Portsmouth office is located at 1827 High Street and the Suffolk office is located in Washington Square Mall at 140 West Washington Street.

Museum receives models

The Virginia Pilot Association has presented the Virginia Beach Maritime Historical Museum with two pilot boat models to be exhibited in the museum on a long-term basis. Built by the Hampton Roads Ship Model Society, these high quality exhibits represent the first of five pilot boat models commissioned by the Pilot Association.

One model is of the two-masted schooner William Starkey, built in 1854 in Medford, Massachusetts. Initially in service with the Boston Pilots, the schooner was purchased by the Virginia Pilot Association in 1854 as the first of eight pilot boats the Association eventually acquired before moving operations ashore in late 1983.

The second is a model of the last pilot boat the Association owned, the cutter Virginia III. Built in 1934 in Wilmington, Delaware, for U.S. Coast Guard Service, the all-steel steam cutter was purchased by the Virginia Pilots in 1949. The cutter was subsequently modernized and converted to diesel power in 1963. During the early 1940's the Virginia (then the Coast Guard cutter Comanche) was the first military vessel engaged in war action in the North Atlantic. Virginia III was retired from pilot service in late 1983.

The Hampton Roads Ship Model Society is a dedicated group of about fifteen area professionals representing various occupations but each with a love and talent for ship modeling.

The two pilot boat models, now on display in the Maritime Museum, are valued at approximately $14,000, and required over 1800 man-hours to construct. The three remaining pilot boats commissioned by the Virginia Pilots are expected to be completed by 1986 and also will be exhibited in the Museum.

According to Museum Director, Admiral Richard E. Rumble, "The opportunity to display the models is exciting. They help tell the story of the Virginia Pilot's role in the maritime history of the area, as well as enhance the Museum by the addition of high quality exhibits. The Virginia Pilots have been and continue to be a vital part of Hampton Roads maritime commerce. The pilot models will complement the Museum's interpretive efforts in this regard and serve to enrich the community and visitor with a greater awareness of their maritime legacy."

Beach Council Actions

The following is a list of some of the actions taken by Virginia Beach City Council at its most recent meeting. Council members are: John A. Baum, Blackwater Borough; Nancy A. Creech, At-Large; Barbara M. Henley, Pungo; Harold Heischberger, At-Large; H. Jack Jennings, Lynnhaven; Louis R. Jones, Bayside; Robert G. Jones, At-Large; W. H. Kitchin, III, Virginia Beach; Reba S. McClannan, Princess Anne; J. Henry McCoy, Jr.; Kemperville; and Meyera Oberndorf, At-Large. The City Manager is Thomas Muehlenbeck. City Attorney is Dale Blinson.

Meeting Date: March 5 - Eight members present; Mayor Jones, R. Jones and Kitchin absent.
Informal Session 12:30 p.m.

Creech requested that proposals of the Garden Club and Daughters of the American Revolution on the use of the Francis Land House be incorporated in the City Manager's report on the house.

At the suggestion of Jennings, the staff will make recommendations on a proposal to change the subdivision ordinance to permit condominiums to be constructed without direct access to a public street. The street would be blocked by a gate or guard to insure privacy and protection.

The ordinance currently requires subdivisions to have direct access to a public street or a street abutting a public street. The request originated with the developers of Eagles Nest Point.

At the request of Heischberger, Council will discuss a proposed $5,000 contribution to the Sanctuary of Tidewater, Inc. at its informal session next Monday. The city manager recommended against making the contribution.

Jennings was advised that the best procedure citizens who question assessments of their real estate can follow is to go directly to the City Assessor's Office, learn the procedure for determining the assessments, and have the office take a second look at their particular assessments.

Carl Thoren, assistant engineer in the Public Works Department presented a report on the new flood plain maps prepared by the U.S. Corps of Engineers.

Staff report was presented on stripe removal on Atlantic Avenue to eliminate parking on the street during the upcoming tourist season. Muehlenbeck was authorized to make decisions administratively on requests to have planning items expedited by City Council.

The city's 1984 advertising campaign will be presented to Council next Monday at 11 a.m.
Formal Session 2 p.m.

On the strip

Parking law to change

Come the Ides of March, and Atlantic Avenue will revert to a no-parking zone.

The stripping for on-street parking in place during the off-season will be removed by mid-March. Traffic Engineer John W. Herzke, said, to avoid the anticipated traffic congestion and blockage along Atlantic Avenue.

Councilman W.H. Kitchin III has asked the staff to submit a report on his suggestion to leave the markings in place and have a trial run for a plan which may be included in the Atlantic Avenue beautification. The plan calls for three lanes of traffic with a left turn lane, wider sidewalks and parking.

Not only did Herzke recommend against leaving the parking but he also said that a one-way system should be considered even though such a scheme has not been favorably received in the past by the Beach Borough merchants and hotel representatives.

He said the future proposal of only three lanes could possibly create congestion that could limit the ability of the police to respond to emergencies.

The report was submitted to Council at an informal session Monday afternoon, eliciting no comment. City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck announced his intention of removing the stripping and parking this month. Councilman Kitchin, who had made the original suggestion, was absent.

Manager advises against $5,000

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck has advised City Council not to appropriate $5,000 to the Sanctuary of Tidewater, Inc.

He said both Dr. George Sjolund, city health director, and Mrs. Frances Elrod, social services director, have concluded that contributions for the Sanctuary should come from the private sector.

The Sanctuary provides temporary shelter to pregnant, unsupported women in the Tidewater area and has been in operation for one year.

Social services' priorities for adult shelter, he said, are aimed at providing shelter for battered women and for emergency shelter for families with children.

Muehlenbeck said that the need for a shelter for pregnant women in Virginia Beach appears to be very small, approximately three to four each year. Also, social services has an intake service for pregnant girls and women that assists in assessing individual needs and resources and provides services or makes appropriate referrals.

Council will discuss the matter further next week.

"Anne of a Thousand Days" at Kempsville

By Joyce Marland
Special To The VBS
If you've never been bitten by the acting bug, you may not know how it feels to give up six weeks of your life...or what we call "free time"...and live, sleep and breathe theater. That's exactly what a dedicated troupe of performers and technical staff have been doing at the Kempsville Playhouse, reading Maxwell Anderson's "Anne of the Thousand Days."

This tale of the obsessive love of King Henry VIII for the lovely Anne Boleyn opens Thursday, March 8, at 8 p.m., and continues on the 9, 10, 15,

16 and 17 at 8 p.m., with 3 p.m. matinees on Sundays the 11 and 18. Heading up the cast of 20 in the title role of Anne (Boleyn) will be Ann Hicks. Ann scored a triumph in last year's Shakespeare-By-The Sea Festival as Rosalind in "As You Like It" and in "The Prime of Miss Jean Brodie." As Henry VIII is Tom Stroup, a drama teacher with the Newport News school system. Ernie Fedula, whose credits include the Riverview Playhouse and the Virginia Beach Little Theater, portrays the aging Cardinal Woolsey. "Anne of the Thousand Days" covers a span of 10 years in the reign of Henry VIII. Unable to have a son by his Queen Catherine, Henry defies the laws of state and church to take Anne as his wife. In doing so, he changes the course of history, breaks from the Pope in Rome and establishes the Church of England. Unfortunately for Anne, who is imprisoned in the Tower of London as the play opens, his passion eventually moves on to a succession of new Queens. Her reign lasts 1,000 days. Directed by Henry Deshields, who has been cited as one of the areas most talented and innovative directors, "Anne" contains something for everyone. In addition to its lyrical and often frank dialogue, costumes of the Tudor period enhance the romantic characterizations. Most of the lush costumes are designed and executed by the Playhouse's Costume Mistress, Peggy MacArthur, but due to time limitations, many of the male actor's costumes will be supplied by one of New York's finest costume rental houses. An innovative set consisting of stone facade tritowers representing the Tudor architecture of the period has been designed by Cameron Dye. To further enhance the production "live" madrigal singers and authentic Baroque music by the St. Aidan's Recorder Society will be heard. English period dances, choreographed by Pilar Topia, are featured within the play itself. If you have never visited the city's comfortable 200 seat Kempsville Playhouse theater, located in the Parks and Recreation Center on Monmouth Lane, you have a treat in store for you. Just a phone call away at 495-1892 will bring you an evening of enjoyment that you will remember for well over 1,000 days.

Judges helped keep order when the rapist attacked

ended. I don't think he thought anything else would have made a difference." Mills, who was seated behind the rapist's family, said the family seemed to be very distressed. The ruckus came as quite a surprise. "It did," she said. "I don't think anyone expected any violence of that degree." Mills said that at no time did she fear for her safety or the safety of the 28 Kempsville High School seniors who were in court that day participating in the city's "Day in Court" program.

"The man's anger was directed at Ken Phillips and not at us," Mills said. Mills said the disturbance, which resulted in Smith being bodily subdued and escorted from the courtroom, might have been more disruptive had it not been for the judges on the scene, which also included Calvin Spain who has just been appointed to the circuit court. "The judges were very calm," Mills said. "I believe it was their calmness that helped to maintain, for those of us in the gallery, a certain amount of calmness. The gallery, which was crowded, never really got disrupted."

New flood plain maps coming

velopable, would be in areas where filling is prohibited. To alleviate the hardship of these property owners, Council is considering a change which would permit filling in for development areas where flood plain levels have increased no more than a foot. In these cases the first floor level also would have to be increased a foot.

The problem with this alternative is that canals would be created requiring costly city maintenance, something Council tried to avoid with its flood plains ordinance. Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. expressed concern about private property rights. "What is going to be the policy in regard to reimbursement, restitution, redemption. If it were me, and I had a tract of land, I would be greatly concerned."

Thoren replied that after the maps are official, the city will have to comply with the new elevations. "If we don't go along we'd be jeopardizing flood insurance," he said. Jennings said he was thinking about people who have owned property "for years and years and years" who find they have worthless property.

Gallagher and Associates now has a rezoning application before the Planning Commission for a tract of land which would fit into that category. Using the new maps and the current ordinance provisions, the land could not be developed. However, since the flood plain in that area is not expected to rise more than one foot during a 100-year storm, the modification discussed by Council Monday would permit development of at least some of the property.

Beginning at Indian River Road northward, the main influence on the plain is not tidal but storm water runoff, Thoren said. In the area of Princess Anne Road, Leroy Drive, the City Garage area, Seaboard Road, West Neck Creek where it crosses Princess Anne Road, Thoren said the elevation is beginning to rise because the stream is not large enough to carry the increased storage runoff. Although the flood plain here has expanded above the five-foot contour, Thoren said, the change is not too drastic.

By the area of Landstown Road, the Lake Placid Subdivision, London Bridge Road and the lower end of the Oceana Naval Air Station, the elevations reach nine feet where they had originally been five.

Thoren said the maps have been submitted to the Federal Emergency Management Agency which operates the flood insurance program originally under the Department of Housing and Urban Development.

A 90-day period will be allowed for public comment which Hertzke said that flood plains cannot be filled without affecting storage capacity.

Baum said that Council would "not be doing anybody a favor by allowing them to build in (the flood plain)."

Hertzke said he shared Jennings' concern about the property owners but was also concerned about the possible rash of applications by developers to get in before the new maps are adopted.

Baum said he would like to see all the floodways dedicated to the city and believes most of the developers would be glad to give them to the city.

Part of the Gallagher tract is located in the Air Implementation Compatibility Use Zone (AICUZ) and much of the land north of the tract is within the zone where development is restricted because of the proximity of the Naval Air Station, City Planning Director Robert Scott said.

Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf wanted to know what the city's policy would be on the tolerance level. She asked whether the city would continue to develop areas when it knows full well that flooding in the area would inconvenience the residents.

Hertzke said that permits for development are based on ten year storms, that is the storm that is likely to occur once in ten years.

"It's the type of thing people have to live with in the coastal plains," Baum said. He added that if the city adopts the new maps there will be less flooding than there has been in the past.

Nero conducts pops

One of the great names of modern popular music will conduct The Virginia Pops in its March concert.

Peter Nero, who has been described as everything from "a musical mixmaster" by the Baltimore Evening Sun to "a veritable genius of popular music" by The Kansas City Times, will perform with the Pops on Saturday, March 17 at 8 p.m. in Hampton Institute's Ogden Hall and on Sunday, March 18 at 2:30 p.m. in the Virginia Beach Pavilion.

Nero calls himself "a musical schizoid: I grew up learning and loving classical music, but on the sly I was learning jazz."

By the time he was 22, Nero had studied on scholarship at the Juilliard

School of Music, graduated from Brooklyn College, appeared as a guest with several symphony orchestras and won a national television talent contest. Breaking away from his classical training, he determined to express his own musical identity through the freedom and creativity of jazz and for six years performed exclusively and successfully as a jazz pianist.

Tickets for the Ogden Hall concert are $7 to $13 at First Virginia Bank branches and at the Virginia Orchestra office (623-2310 Southside or 380-0040 Peninsula). Tickets for the Pavilion concert are $10 to $16 at First Virginia Bank and at Pavilion Box Office (428-8000).

Perk up your oysters

Cracker crumbs give fried oysters great flavor

Oil Fire - A good safety precaution is to have a brown shopping bag handy, filled with fine sand. If fire occurs, pour or throw the sand directly onto the fire. It will quickly extinguish it.

Note: The best place to keep the bag of sand is in the cover it with the lid as soon as possible.

Note: Never use water or a cloth to put out a fire. It could make it WORSE.

Oil Paintings, Cleaning - Remove it from the wall, lay it flat, then sprinkle salt onto the oil painting. Shake the painting from side to side for about five minutes. Next, turn the painting over and shake it until all salt is removed.

Onions, Peeling - Peel onions under water or pour boiling water over them before peeling them to avoid tearing while peeling them.

Orange, Peeling - Drop the orange in very hot water for five minutes to make the skin come off easily. The white membrane will pull off twice as easily, too.

Oranges And Lemons, Getting More Juice - If an orange or lemon is dried up, drop it into boiling water for five minutes. You will be surprised how much juice is in there.

Oysters, Frying - Before frying oysters, roll them in a mixture of two cups of dry cracker crumbs with one to two teaspoons of celery salt. It'll give them a magnificent flavor.

Forensics results

No single team dominated the annual Beach District Forensics meet, held recently at Princess Anne High. Each of the city's seven high schools won at least one first place, within two of the nine forensics competitions. The balance of winners is an indication of the strength of the forensics program at each school.

Dana Spanoulis of First Colonial High won the girls' original oratory, and her teammate, Mindi Russell, won girls' poetry reading. Angela Dykins of Princess Anne placed second in the girls' original oratory contest, and Audrey Hernandez of Cox placed second in the girls' poetry reading competition.

Eric Coleman of Cox took first place in boys' prose reading, while Monique Travelstead, also of Cox, won first place in the girls' prose reading. Barry Chovitz of Kempville placed second in boys' prose reading, and Lisa Randazzo of Bayside placed second in the girls' prose reading competition.

In boys' extemporaneous speaking, Darrin Tisdale of Princess Anne won first place, while second place went to David Pernini of Bayside.

In girls' extemporaneous speaking, first place was won by Kimberly Lang of Kellam; Jackie Haley of Bayside placed second.

First place in boys' original oratory went to David Arnold of Bayside; coming in second was Bruce Spiva of Kempville.

The boys' poetry reading winner was Allen Mears of Green Run, while Patrick Dooley of Cox was second.

Cynthia Wright of Kempville won the spelling competition, and second place went to Green Run's Jennifer Shu, last year's winner of the Virginia Beach Public Schools Spelling Bee.

ROWS keep women on the move!

Photographs by Dolores King, Public Relations Chairman, ROWS

The Retired Officers Wives Society of Tidewater was organized in 1973 in Virginia Beach. In response to an invitation in a local newspaper, seventy concerned ladies attended an organizational meeting at the officers club at Little Creek Amphibious Base. Today the membership of ROWS is 530.

Membership is open to wives and widows of retired officers and to retired women officers of all branches of the Armed Forces; however, eligibility is limited to those living in Virginia Beach, Norfolk, Portsmouth and Chesapeake. There is an associate membership available to members who move from the area.

The Society's main purpose is to promote friendship among the members. Before this group was founded there was no club of this kind for the retired community. These ladies did not have the same interests as the members of the active duty officers wives clubs. Many had been stationed here earlier, but many had never had a tour here. They were attracted to the area because of the large number of bases with commissaries, exchanges, clubs and the Portsmouth Naval Hospital nearby.

ROWS has provided a place to meet and make new friends and has provided programs and activities that interest this age group. Most members say that they are more active now than they were when their husbands were on active duty.

The Club meets monthly on the second Thursday of the month all year long. There is a luncheon meeting with a program. Twice a year, the Club sponsors Fashion Shows, such as the one to be given this coming Thursday, March 8, at Lake Wright Restaurant by The Clothes Closet. There will be six models from the membership and three professional models.

Among the outstanding programs of the year was the talk by Karen Williams, wife of the assistant naval attaché to Russia, who showed color slides to illustrate their tour behind the Iron Curtain. Another program which was well received was given by "travel experts" from the membership. They gave "Travel Tips for the Ret Set". Ret (Retired) not Jet!

Members of ROWS are world travelers. Within the past year, they have been to China, Africa, New Zealand and elsewhere. Their up-to-date and personal information will be helpful to those contemplating trips later. They explained how to get a passport, visa, tip pack of foreign currency, international driver's license and provided pamphlets about customs rules and regulations. Finally, they explained three different ways to avoid jet lag!

In addition to these monthly programs, the Club sponsors many activities to keep the members busy. There are three bowling leagues, four bridge groups including a couples' evening bridge; twilight golf and shopping tours. Evenings at the dinner theater are arranged and other special events, such as taking over the Norfolk Little Theater for a performance of "The Desert Song" on Friday, March 9.

Over the years the Club has sponsored classes in cooking, bridge, tennis, golf and presently has a large number of members enrolled in a jazzercise program. Members have banded together to form investment groups.

One would think that with all of these recreational activities, the members are only interested in entertaining themselves. This is not true. Through the past decade, ROWS has contributed funds to many worthy civic and charitable causes. But more than that, the members contribute volunteer hours to dozens of community projects: Response to a recent club survey, based on 45 replies, revealed that ROWS members donate approximately 15,000 volunteer hours annually to community service in such fields as church work, hospital work, Red Cross, Naval League, Meals on Wheels, Civic Leagues, Cancer Crusade, libraries, court docents, volunteers at Seashore State Park and serving as election officials.

As one member said, "Retirement sure keeps us busy!"

Crime program given at Malibu

A crime prevention program was recently held at Malibu Elementary School: Master Officer Robert C. Poyner, III, visited Malibu, a school he once attended as a student, and twice weekly presents an hour lesson instructing third and fourth graders on ways they can protect themselves and teach others what they have learned.

The Virginia Beach Police Department wants young children throughout the Virginia Beach area to be more aware of ways they can participate in crime prevention.

Poyner said, "Every year 20,000 people are killed nationwide as a result of crime, many are young children."

The purpose of this program is to educate in prevention so Virginia Beach will remain a good place in which to live.

It took Poyner over a year to compile a workbook for the crime prevention program which the children use as a guide. The workbook lessons include: law and crime, home security, shoplifting, vandalism, and personal safety. Students must complete the workbook, make posters and complete a written test. When they have completed the three-week course and all requirements they receive a Junior Crime Prevention Badge and Certificate signed by Officer Poyner and Charles R. Wall, Virginia Beach Chief of Police.

Poyner, a police officer for 11 years, is not only interested in crime protection but is very active in the Virginia Wildlife Federation, encouraging all in the protection of our natural resources and wildlife. He is concerned with the wildlife in the area. Poyner said, "I'm not against hunting although I do all my hunting with a camera, but explained many are not aware of the endangered species, the necessary skill, proper planning or the correct use of hunting game."

Poyner has been honored by the state as well as by the Virginia

Beach Jaycees as one of the Outstanding Young Virginians for 1984.

McClanan used as 'scapegoat,' she charges, in Ali's boxing camp project

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

Says facility probably would have received Council approval

It's too late now, but had Councilwoman Reba S. McClanan and Muhammad Ali's attorney Richard Hirschfeld discussed the matter, Virginia Beach might not have lost a new $2.7 million training facility for boxing hopefuls.

"I had not made a decision and I had not voted on anything," said the four-year Princess Anne representative, in whose borough at the corners of Indian River and West Neck roads the athletic training center and dorms would have been located.

In a letter to Planning Director Robert Scott, Hirschfeld said the proposal was dropped because of potential adverse public reaction and more specifically "based on McClanan's opposition to the project." Hirschfeld, out of the country, could not be reached for elaboration. Edward S. Garcia, Sr., whose 90-acre estate was to be purchased by Ali if the proposal went through, said plans for the training facility have been "abandoned." (See related story, this page).

Because the proposal would have required zoning ordinance changes, the matter recently reached city council as a "very routine matter on the consent agenda," Mrs. McClanan said, and very few comments on the proposal were made. Council asked the planning commission study the question and make a recommendation to council. Before the question reached the planners, Hirschfeld withdrew the request. This action surprised Mrs. McClanan.

"What surprised me about it is that it's part of the same group involved in the Pavilion Tower Hotel," Ali and Garcia both hold interests in the hotel, as did Hirschfeld. Hirschfeld owned 11% but sold it back to the parent company. In addition, because of its proximity to NAS Oceana, the Tower was built despite vigorous protests from the military and the civilian communities.

"The military and all the others didn't stop them," Mrs. McClanan said. "That's why I find it hard to believe that one individual making some comments would cause them to back off. I think there has to be more to it than that."

Does Mrs. McClanan think she was used as a scapegoat in this issue?

"Oh yes," she said. "I don't think that (my remarks) is any more the reason behind this than the man in the moon. I don't know the real reason (why the plans were dropped). It's nice to say I caused it."

She said Hirschfeld misconstrued her comments made on behalf of her constituents as her personal position on the matter.

"He jumped to the conclusion," she said, "and that's his problem not mine; because I would have been remiss when that came up if I had not expressed their concerns." Mrs. McClanan said details of the impact of the facility were not provided, thus sparking community concern.

Mrs. McClanan said that when she first heard of the training facility idea, her immediate thoughts were of the lack of public services in that area, which was a detail into which the investors should have checked.

"Nobody contacted me, certainly, and not that I expected them to," she said. "But I would have thought they would have talked to the planning department of someone before they put that much money into it."

McClanan said that the city's growth has taken its toll on the Princess Anne rural residents.

"In a lot of ways their lives have been threatened and changed a whole lot more by this city's growth and development than anybody else in the city," she said.

"They've seen the county merge into the city; they've seen their taxes go up tremendously and really the only

Sanctuary donation approved

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Virginia Beach City Council agreed by a vote of 9-2 Monday afternoon to contribute $5,000 to the Sanctuary of Tidewater, a temporary shelter for pregnant women.

In making the contribution, the city became the first of six Tidewater localities being requested for help from the year-old agency. According to Pat Stolle, of Virginia Beach, president of the Governing Board, the agency is applying for funds from the United Way for future support.

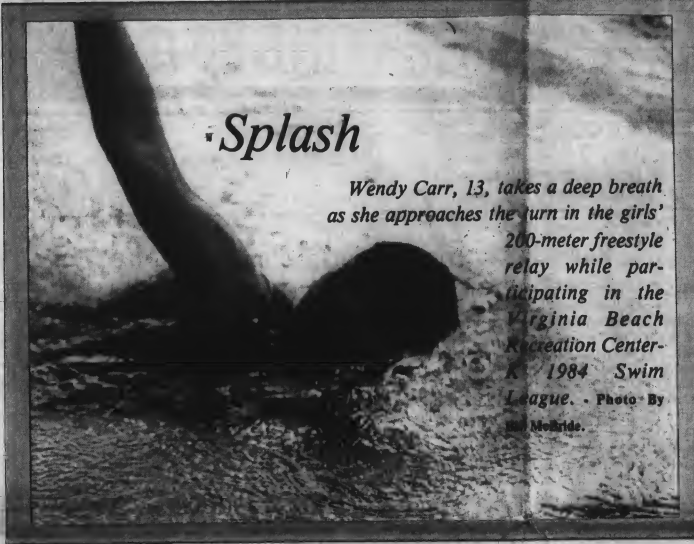

Some objection was expressed by Council members because the allocation is being made apart from the budget process, where it would come under greater scrutiny. Principal supporters of the appropriation were Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. and Harold Heischlager and Councilwoman Nancy Crech.

Mayor Louis R. Jones and Councilman Dr. J. Henry McCoy Jr. dissented.

Stolle said that the agency proposes to raise $35,000 from the cities -- $10,000 from Norfolk, and $5,000 each from Virginia Beach, Hampton, Newport News, Portsmouth and Chesapeake. She said the agency has received favorable encouragement from Portsmouth, Chesapeake and Norfolk.

The Sanctuary is located in a former convent in the Ocean View section of Norfolk. Funding so far has been from donations from the private sector including civic clubs, community organizations and the Catholic Diocese

Water bill worries may scuttle bond referendum

Apprehension over ever-increasing water bills may scuttle chances of a successful bond referendum to finance the Lake Gaston water project, Virginia Beach Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf said at an informal session of Council Monday afternoon.

To soften the blow for water customers, she suggested looking into financing the pipeline by increasing the real estate tax rate in areas that are served by city water.

The project, which is expected to cost $173 million over a seven-year period involves the construction of a pipeline from the Pea Hill Creek tributary of Lake Gaston to Norfolk's raw water transmission system in Suffolk. The current Capital Budget provides for almost $60,000 of the cost, furnished by bonds.

Oberndorf said that a number of her constituents have expressed concern about the expected rise in water costs which makes her question the chances of a bond referendum which will be needed to finance the project.

One advantage in the real estate tax, she said, is that it would be tax deductible on federal and state returns, while the cost of water is not.

Also, she said, businesses which are relatively small water consumers, but who benefit greatly from its availability to the rest of the city, would be paying more of the cost.

In addition, the elderly and handicapped would not be impacted so greatly because they would be protected by the real estate tax exemptions already on the books.

She asked City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck to look into the feasibility of adopting such a system for financing the project, including costs to the taxpayers, potential tax savings, and the advantages and disadvantages from the staff perspective.

She said the tax should be in effect only during the life of the construction bonds and should be used to pay them off. Operating expenses should remain in the rate base, she said.

Special residents will be welcomed at north end

Backed by residents of North Virginia Beach, Community Alternatives, Inc. will be permitted to provide a beach-front holiday for some of the city's handicapped.

Virginia Beach City Council Monday afternoon unanimously approved a conditional use permit for a family care home on a 6,625-square foot parcel at 113 53rd Street. The home will be used as a summer holiday and respite home for developmentally disabled individuals.

Garcia says Mrs. McClanan had no affect on project's demise

Stories By Greg Goldfarb

Edward S. Garcia, Sr., was to sell his 90-acre estate to Muhammad Ali if the former champ went through with his plans for the boxing camp. But things fell through and Garcia, while now waiting for his condos to be finished on 4th Street, sold his home to a Utah man who owns several ski resorts. In the interim, Garcia and his family are living at Land's End. The new owner will use the estate on a part-time basis.

Garcia said he had little involvement with the boxing camp, other than selling the property. But his impressions are similar to Mrs. McClanan's in regard to why the proposal fell through.

"That's what I understand," Garcia said. "They had a misunderstanding with Mrs. McClanan. He (lawyer, Richard Hirschfeld) jumped a little too quickly."

Garcia said Ali changed his mind about residing here because he felt like the proposed boxing camp "wasn't going to go through."

But Garcia agrees with Mrs. McClanan that the local landowners in the rural area would not have resisted too strongly.

"I don't think they would either," he said. "I agree with her."

Garcia described the situation as a "breakdown of communication," adding that the involved parties "did not communicate at all, if you want to know the truth." Garcia said Ali and Hirschfeld should have talked to at least McClanan, the mayor and the city manager.

Garcia said he thinks Ali is still a friend to Virginia Beach because "Ali has a very kind and gracious heart," and if asked will come back.

"If he's asked to come back for a visit to participate in something the city asked him to do he would do it as a favor to them."

Garcia said McClanan had "done nothing in any way to prevent the training facility from becoming a reality."

Garcia added, "we're in business. We know there's opposition to everything."

Mrs. McClanan, safe in her seat, predicts election will be 'vicious'

Reba McClanan's council seat was up for grabs in this spring's councilmanic election. No one opposed her, just as no one opposed her delegate/husband Glenn the last time his term was up.

Facing four more years on council, Mrs. McClanan is in a position to speak frankly when discussing the general well being of Virginia Beach.

During a recent interview she offered the following observations:

Balancing constituents' interests against what may or may not be in the best interest of the city . . .

"While I want the city to be viable and grow in a way that is desirable, my goal is not ensuring everybody all the money they can possibly make on everything. I don't always think making money ensures the quality of life. If you follow that theory, you can cram houses in just as tight and just as high as you can go to the sky. That way everybody makes a lot of money but the people end up getting hurt in the long run. There's no space to live."

How do you see this spring's election shaping up?

"I think the at-large race is where all the attention is going to be focused. And I think it's going to be very, very tight. I just afraid that things are going to get; you've got some issues in that race that are not very healthy . . . I just hope it doesn't take the slant I'm afraid it's going to. I think it could get very vicious."

In what direction do you think the city should head?

"I would hope that most of us know that there are only some directions in the long run that will suffice. If you're realistic, we know that farming, agriculture, will not always be a part of our economy. The city will develop all the way to the North Carolina line, eventually. And we know that building will not always be an industry. So two of the industries that seem to have a great deal of control and influence at this time in the city will not eventually have any impact because they will kill each other in the long run."

The reason

Reba McClanan said she never talked to Richard Hirschfeld about the proposed boxing training facility and wouldn't even know the man if she met him in the middle of the street. Eddie Garcia said that before the question of the possibility of locating such a camp in Virginia Beach had been dismissed, investors should have talked personally with council members, the mayor and the city manager.

But apparently, investors backed out for reasons unknown to the public. Publielv. Mc-

Clanan was blamed as the reason for the pullout. And while it's true she is a smart, influential woman, she is also fair, open-minded, and admits that the camp might have been approved by council.

No one will know the real reason why Ali backed out. It was probably a combination of speculating that the opposition by McClanan would be strong, plus other private corporate considerations by Ali and/or Hirschfeld.

Jones and Hart

Like Councilman Bob Jones says, when a personal friend of yours, an old college buddy, runs for president it's hard not to support him. Jones made his remarks at a recent press conference during which he announced he would be the coordinator for Gary Hart's Virginia Beach effort.

Jones said he has always been impressed with the man and his intellectual analytical abilities. In describing Hart, Jones is quick to note Hart's likeness to John Kennedy, even admitting that some people have told him there is a JFK likeness in Hart's campaign poster.

About a month ago Jones publicly endorsed Hart in an article published in The Virginia Beach Sun. Jones can recall countless stories about their college days, but Jones would not reveal any spicy or juicy stuff, if there is any at all, into which Hart may have been involved during college.

Jones also admits that efforts for Hart in this area are not as yet monumental, and says his main goal is to get as many people involved in the election and voting for Hart.

Jones must be proud of his friend.

The election

Observers say that this year's field of 12 candidates for this spring's councilmanic election is the smallest in years. Perhaps this will allow the public and the press to better evaluate each of the candidates' views on the issues most important to the city.

Running are:
At-large - (two seats): Jimmy Fant, 45, a political consultant who is in the process of selling his Bali Hai Motel Apartments. This is his first bid. Anne Gimenez, 51, co-pastor of the Rock Church. This is her first public bid. Harold Heischouer, 64, owner of Pembroke Mazda Chrysler Plymouth. He has been on council since 1980, serving as vice mayor from 1980 to 1982. Tom Holland, 36, a Norfolk and Western Railway Co. clerk and vice chairman of the Virginia Beach Wetlands Board is seeking his first term on council. Meyera Oberndorf, 43, is seeking her third term on council. The former schoolteacher is chairman of the Southeastern Virginia Planning District Commission. Robert Plppin, 24, a Christian Broadcasting Network warehouse worker, is making his first bid for public office. He is a former Air Force nuclear weapons specialist. Buddy Riggs, 53, is trying for a second term on council. Riggs, a businessman, served from 1976 to 1980.

Radio stations not serving local music industry

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

When Gov. Chuck Robb instituted the "Made in Virginia" campaign, I was elated to find that someone in a position of influence was willing to push for our "local" talent and its recognition in the community as well as the state. My particular interest centered around the recording industry of Hampton Roads. It has been well over a year, and very little has been done to give the least little bit of recognition to the many people involved in this part of the entertainment industry. It is time that the people of Hampton Roads knew of the terrible disservice our local radio stations are doing to support the local recording industry and its artists. In a cluster of cities we call home lies the greatest saturation of radio stations in the nation; a major industry with great force and diversity. However, these radio stations have yet to make the general public aware of the great force and diversity of recording talent that is alive and well in Southeastern Virginia.

If you think that statement is too strong, take the following quiz: Question one - Which of the following is a local group/artist with an album on sale today in the local music market?

Fairy tales remarkably lacking in fairies

The displays in all the stores around town this month are a vivid reminder that Ireland not only has a patron saint but also a patron fairy. Although there is nothing delicate or winged about the leprechaun, he is nevertheless one of the magical "little people" that have given their name to a special kind of story. Indeed, there are more stories about leprechauns than most other fairies. Alice Boden's "The Field of Buttercups" is a particularly delightful one for small children.

Outside of leprechauns, fairy godmothers, and the occasional elf or dwarf, however, fairy tales are remarkably lacking in fairies. It's as though they are shy and elusive even in stories. One reason is that many of what we call fairy tales are actually animal stories or beast fables. The "Three Bears, Pigs, and Billy Goats" are magical only in that they think and talk like people. Then there are the princess stories. Magical things happen to them through the agency of fairy godmothers or witches. The castles in which they live seem firmly grounded in the Middle Ages, and yet the stories are much older. Does this story sound familiar?

Once there were three sisters. The youngest married a strange being. When she came home to visit, her sisters tried to turn her against her mysterious husband. She did something he had forbidden her to do, and thus lost her husband. But because she really loved him she managed to rescue him and live happily ever after.

Is this "Beauty and the Beast," "East of the Sun and West of the Moon," "The Black Bull of Norway," "The Lame Dog" or "Whitebear Whittington"? Actually it is an ancient Greek myth, "Eros and Psyche." All these fairy tales from France, Germany, the United States, and Scandinavia are variations of the same story. It is strange to think that some forgotten storyteller told that tale to people whose descendants would spread it from Norway to Greece and beyond.

What is it about stories like this, that keeps people telling them generation after generation? In "The Uses of Enchantment" the psychologist Bruno Bettelheim explains his theories about what different story elements symbolize and how they provide acceptable ways of dealing with unacceptable feelings. Whether or not you agree with his theories, it is evident that fairy tales capture bits of a universal human drama. Perhaps this is their greatest source of magic.

Let's talk about the weather

I don't know about you, but I've had enough of this cold weather. Or, more accurately, I'm tired of not knowing what weather to expect.

Sure, you can look at weather pictures in the paper and charts on television, but what does that really tell you? You want to read my fortune also? Weather forecasting is an inexact science. I respect that, but I'll never understand how an adult with children makes a living by being on television for less than five minutes a day, talking about the weather. But more power to them!

We talk about the weather to make conversation. So at least when you bump into your neighbor pulling out of your driveway, you can tell him how nice a day it is as he wished he'd stayed inside. You talk about the weather on Saturday afternoons in the park, while the plants and animals on parade don their best wraps and furs.

"To drift with every passion till my soul is a stringed lute on which all winds can play," the poet, Oscar Wilde, said. The question is: did Oscar consult with meteorologists before going to the park to drift? Or did he merely stick his hand out the window and sweat the air currents? If Oscar relied on weather forecasts before deciding his disposition, he might spend much of his time indoors, which might also have been a blessing in disguise. In public, the profligate Big O would wear long hair, velvet coat, and a sunflower in the lapel while walking a turtle. His home was filled with peacock plumes and blue china. But this guy was crazy anyway. He was a genius and brilliant, but also dumb enough to vainly sue the Marquis of Queensberry for libel and was subsequently thrown in jail for being gay. He became suicidal and impoverished as the alcoholic drank himself to death. He was 46. Sound pretty gross. Back to the weather.

The nicest thing about the weather is that it's constantly changing. But wait a minute, maybe that's not good. Wouldn't it be better if the weather stayed the same most of the time? Miami? The North Pole? How in the world does a television weather person stay in business in Palm Beach, San Diego or the Arctic? All he or she can do is tell them how cold or hot it's going to get. At least weathermen in our area face a challenge: Because Virginia Beach is protected by two natural barriers, the Appalachians to the west and the Atlantic to the east, we feel the remnants and weird endwinds of the major weather patterns affecting the southeastern seaboard. This makes for our on-again off-again hot and cold weather which brings me back to the beginning.

difference they see is they get garbage collection. As far as I can tell the roads aren't improved that much. Maybe they have a little more police and fire protection, but besides from that, I didn't think their lives have been enhanced at all by the so-called benefits of being part of the city."

Mrs. McClanan said that even though she has received calls and letters from the residents living in the rural borough thanking her for expressing their views on keeping the boxing camp out of the area, there was a good chance that had the principals persisted, it might have become a reality.

"One man said to me they kind of decided that the people involved in that usually got what they wanted anyway and there wasn't much point in their fighting it," Mrs. McClanan said of a conversation she has with a Princess Anne borough resident.

Does this mean the local residents would have us rolled over and accepted the facility?

"That's kind of the general attitude that one man expressed," she said. "Because his attitude was, 'they have more money than we do!'"

"He jumped to the conclusion, and that's his problem not mine; because I would have been remiss when that came up if I had not expressed their concerns." - Councilwoman McClanan objected to the permit because of possible encroachment of commercialism in the single-family neighborhood.

When the applicant agreed to include a condition to the request that no fees will be charged for lodging, opposition was turned around into support for the project. Carter "Tuck" Anderson, president of the North Virginia Beach Civic League, said the league has always supported the project but was against commercial expansion of North Virginia Beach. He said the League already has contributed $1,000 to the project and plans to work with the Community Services Board to continue the program. "We have joined hands," he said.

J. None of the above
The answer to question one is "K". All of the above. The answer to question two is "I". All of the above. I must also add that these lists are only partial with respect to both answering columns. Why does the vast majority of the general public remain unaware of this untapped resource? It is because radio, the voice of this or any community, has been all but silent.

Most people realize that an album is, in all its aspects of production, an expensive venture. Local albums are usually done at great personal expense as opposed to fully-contracted financial backing. Few backers are found because people who have money are unaware of the local industry and, therefore, lack enthusiasm. This lack of enthusiasm stems not from an absence of talent or quality, but an absence of credibility that would insure some form of return on their investment. The barometer of credibility when referring to the music industry in any community is the amount of time and concern given to it by its radio stations. Time and Concern equals Promotion and Airplay.

Why, then, do local artists continue to try to market their talent through recording and performing when, from a business standpoint, a recording effort would be unwise? The answer is that a recording format is one of the very few ways to market your talent as a musician, vocalist, or songwriter. The artists who have done so have done it out of faith in themselves, and, a public they believe to be interested and receptive. The public is interested and receptive, but is also grossly uninformed. Why have the local stations not taken the initiative in making the public more aware of the variety of recording talent? It is possible that they feel the consideration given to local talent, (airplay), would be a risk to their ratings. In other words, if it is not on the Billboard Top 40, it does not merit consideration. Are we not worthy of their time? Do they not recognize the existence of a local recording industry? Is our quality not comparable to nationally known recordings? If any of these is an excuse, then the radio industry is simply not listening.

One of the great ironies of this situation is that it hurts the radio industry when they do not consider the local artists at hand. This injury is especially felt in the areas of progressive programming and professional notoriety. Outside of our area, very few people have heard of our local radio stations. Stations are remembered and talked about because they helped to create a certain "musical awareness" in the communities they serve. Areas with this awareness, such as Nashville, Detroit, and Los Angeles were brought about (made aware) because the population and the music

What about the tourist industry?

"The tourists interests in the city have never allowed themselves to be a part of the city; they want to be apart. They want to be treated separately, is my observation after being on council. There are some very greedy people down there (in the Beach Borough) who want everything for themselves and they're not willing to look at the total city. It's created, more hard feelings in the city; the antagonism between the general public and the city and the lack of understanding of what the tourist industry does for the city and vice versa. This is something I'm not sure how much money we'd have to spend to change that image. And it's a shame. Because really, together, the opportunity is just tremendous. We have a lot here and we have a great city. But the people in the city feel they're not wanted down there; and they'll tell you they don't want you."

Nick Wright, president of the Tourist Bureau of Virginia Beach could not be reached for comment.

How can the city be brought together?

"To make this city function, it's got to be a partnership. When you've got 300,000 people living in a city who can sell it better than those 300,000 people? We know people all over the world."

Did you think twice about seeking to retain your council seat?

"Yes. I thought a long time about it back before Christmas. I wasn't sure I was going to run."

industry made it that way. Radio stations, recording studios, clubs, concerts, and other support groups and businesses recognized the talents within their midst and pushed for recognition in and beyond their own boundaries. It was economically good for their businesses. It gave them the prestige of being truly pioneering and progressive. It instilled community pride. This pride transferred to support of concerts, record sales, and in-house performances. It fostered traditions and attitudes that are still alive, and broke ground for new ones. If the area was missing an identity or base from which to build, an effort was made to create one.

How can an area that is musically aware be formulated if there are few or no recognized local artists to make it that way? Artists become recognized through exposure and support from the business institutions that are a part of their music industry. For the recording musician, radio is the central institution of that industry. It is the "sound" of the area. Right now, we sound like a lot of other areas. What will make us alive, unique, and new? Concentrate on the sound that comes from here, not from someplace else.

Boxer Doberman show set

A dog show for Boxers and Doberman Pinschers will be held at 10 a.m. on Saturday, March 17, at the Virginia Beach Civic Center located at 19th and Pacific Avenues in Virginia Beach.

The show is sponsored by two Tidewater clubs: The Indian River Boxer Club and the Cavalier Doberman Pinscher Club. Admission to the show is $2 for adults, $1 for students; those under 6 are free.

This year's show boasts 150 dogs exhibiting in classes for all ages, from puppies to champions. Dogs will be brought from throughout the Mid-Atlantic area, to compete against several past champions and their kennel-mates from the Tidewater area.

Birdneck Point Boxers, owned by the Browns of Chesapeake, has shown many Boxers to their championships, both in this Virginia area, and throughout the East coast. Shown this month will be Touch of Class, who since last year's show has won enough classes to be declared a champion. His kennelmate, Penny will show in the class for fawn bitches. Boxers may only be fawn or brindle in color, and there are separate classes for each color and sex. And making her debut is Centerfold, who will compete in the puppy division. Also, competing for the first time will be Hogan, owned by the Landys of Virginia Beach and Rocky, owned by the Mosqueras of Norfolk. Puppies must be between the age of 6-12 months, and may only compete as adults after their first birthday.

Dobermans, like the Boxers, are shown according to their sex and their color. A Doberman may be black, red, blue or fawn in color; the classes are divided so that each entry is shown in classes for black colored dogs and classes for the reds, blues and fawns.

A dog (male) or bitch (female) may be judged at any dog show as having all the necessary traits for his breed, but his true worth is the ability to pass on these excellent qualities to his get or offspring. The Cavalier Doberman Pinscher Club has, at this show, two special classes where stud dogs and brood bitches are each shown with two of their get and are judged on their abilities to reproduce themselves.

This Specialty Dog Show represents dog owners' and breeders' attempts to produce dogs that are correct in conformation and movement. The judges for each breed examine the entries and determine, in their opinion, which entry measures up to the ideal standards set up for each breed. This dog show provides a fine opportunity to observe the special attention given by dog owners to produce new generations that meet these standards of excellence.

of Richmond, which also made the building available to the group.

The Sanctuary is non-sectarian and accepts payment from clients according to their ability to pay.

On the basis of a report from Frances Elrod, Virginia Beach Social Services director, City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck advised against funding since Social Services has an intake service for pregnant girls and women that assists in assessing individuals and provides services or makes appropriate referrals.

Elrod reported that during the first year of service, the Sanctuary received 313 requests from pregnant women, and of this number 72 became residents of the facility, seven of whom were from Virginia Beach. She said individual pro-life and abortion beliefs may have played some part in the development of services to girls and women in Tidewater and may lend itself to fragmentation of services.

Jennings said the organization was concerned with basic humanity that "we don't have that many of."

McCoy said "You can't oppose something like this without being a dirty guy." He said he could go along with an appropriation through the budget process, but that there were similar projects all over the city. He disagreed with Jennings that there were not many projects as worthy.

Heischberger, who had first conditioned his motion on the contributions by other cities, changed it to an allocation with no restrictions.

Creech agreed, saying that while there are lots of good projects, Council had to pick and choose. "I don't see why the city shouldn't take a leading position."

After the vote, Vice Mayor Barbara Henley said she had mixed emotions. "I don't like doing anything outside the budget." She reminded Jennings that this was his stance during last year's budget process.

Jennings said that he had not changed his position, that the last year's list of requests amounted to $1.3 million while the Sanctuary's request was for $5,000.

'Now is the time to speak' - Bob Jones says

"Now is the time to speak," said Virginia Beach City Councilman Robert G. Jones Monday afternoon, to block legislation that would remove cable TV from local control.

At an informal session of Council, he said that he is writing a letter to U.S. Rep. William Whitehurst to reinforce the city's stand against the legislation declared earlier in a resolution.

"Now is the time to speak," he said, because within two weeks it will all be over.

Jones said that the legislation before Congress, a major issue at the recent meeting of the National League of Cities (NLC) in Washington, would preempt local control and turn it over to the Federal or State governments. The cable industry is pushing through the legislation, Jones said, but the chairman of the House Committee is sympathetic to cities.

Jones, who attended the NLC meeting, said that he found that all cities shared the same problems with cable companies -- a "public be damned attitude." He said it was a case of the cable companies launching into the business with ideas of instant gold, which did not materialize, so that many are going back on their contracts.

The contracts will be undermined if the Federal legislation is approved, he said.

Does the cable casting of Virginia Beach City Council meetings give an edge to incumbents over other candidates who do not get the same exposure?

Councilman John A. Baum seems to think it's something like a double-edged sword. There are advantages and disadvantages according to how the candidates come over the tube. "If you stop the broadcasts for a couple of months until the May 1 Councilmanic election, he said, "you won't be fair to anybody."

Still, Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. wants an opinion from City Attorney Dale Bimson, he said Monday afternoon, to make sure the city is in complete compliance with the FCC's equal time policy for all candidates.

Mayor Louis R. Jones said he had already asked Bimson to look into the matter, and that two or three other Council members had asked him the same thing.

The problem is a new one because the broadcasting of the Council meetings started only in January. The meetings are carried over the city's public access channel furnished by Cox Cable TV and filmed by personnel in the city's public relations department.

Four of the incumbents are candidates in the May 1 election -- Baum, Councilman Harold Heischberger, and Councilwoman Meyera Oberdorf and Reba McClanan.

Another cable program which featured Ann Gimenez, another Council candidate, already has been discontinued for the duration of the campaign.

Jennings said that a review of the Council program is scheduled for April in any event. Jennings said it is possible that he might be in the position of an incumbent-candidate in two years and he wanted to know the rules.

McClanan said she did not think it appropriate to take Council off TV for two months during a period when Council has significant things to consider -- such as the operating budget.

Jennings said all he wanted to ascertain was what was fair and equal treatment.

Councilwoman Nancy Creech said she voted against having the Council sessions viewed over TV because of the possibility of abuse of the privilege. She said she recognizes that some Council members are talkative and some are not, but that "we have to assume Council members are honest and have integrity." She said she could not see Council members getting on TV and campaigning.

Councilman Robert G. Jones said the Communications Act covers the subject.

Mayor Jones said that since it involved a legal matter Council may want to discuss it in executive session.

The Lighter Side

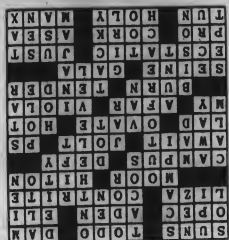

Paint, paint and more paint hints

Paint Brush, Hardened - Soak a hardened paint brush in turpentine for two to three minutes. Squeezing the bristle between the fingers helps break up stubborn old paint as well. Rinse the brush thoroughly in fresh turpentine.

Or simmer the brush in hot white vinegar for twenty minutes. Then wash it in warm soapy water.

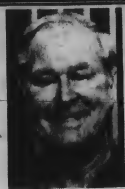

Paint Odor, Removing Put a shallow baking dish in the center of a freshly painted room. Half fill it with cold water, then peel and cut a fairly large onion in half. Put the onion halves in the water, close the door, and leave it overnight. No odors will remain.

Solution

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Paint On Floors, Removing - Whether it's wood, tile, or any other type of floor, the best thing to use is nail polish remover. Lay a dampened cloth flat on the paint stain for two or three minutes to soften the paint. Then wipe it off. Now, wipe the spot with a soft cloth soaked in warm, sudsy water, then polish.

Paint On Furniture, Removing - If the paint is fresh, use fine steel wool dipped in any liquid cleansing wax. If the paint is old or dry, apply a soft cloth soaked in linseed oil. Let the cloth rest on the stain for five minutes to soften the paint, then wipe it off.

Paint On Glass, Removing - A soft cloth soaked in hot, but not boiling, white vinegar will do the job. As it softens, scrape off the paint with a razor blade, then continue to rub.

Paint On Material, Removing - If the material is colored, dip the stain into turpentine for one minute, then work it between the fingers till the paint breaks up. Now, dip the material in ammonia for a few seconds, then wash by hand using warm water and detergent. Rinse well and hang out in the sunshine to dry.

Note: Do not wash in a washing machine or dry spin and be careful of flames when using turpentine. Or if the paint is wet, and is on washable white material, wash it with hot water and detergent, then blot it in the same sudsy water, but add a teaspoonful of paraffin.

Note: If the paint is dry, soak in turpentine, then wash by hand and dry it in the sunshine.

Paint On Tiles, Removing - The best thing to use is a soft cloth soaked in turpentine.

Painted Walls, Cleaning - Mix together two tablespoons of powdered borax, one teaspoon of ammonia and two quarts of warm water. No soap is necessary. Apply this mixture with a soft cloth. It works very well.

'Loveovers' from leftovers

Next time you have some chicken or turkey left from the roast, turn it into a glamorous Chicken Casino. Fluffy, hot rice adds nutrition and helps stretch the menu with delicious ease.

CHICKEN CASINO

- 1/2 cup each chopped onions and green pepper
 - 2 tablespoons butter
 - 1/4 cup flour
 - 1 cup each milk and chicken broth
 - 2 tablespoons dry sherry or other dry white wine can (2 ounces) sliced mushrooms, drained (about 1/4 cup)
 - 2 cups chopped cooked chicken or turkey
 - 1/4 cup diced pimientos
 - 2 hard-cooked eggs, sliced
 - 4 cups hot cooked rice
- Cook onions and green pepper in butter until tender. Blend in flour. Add milk, broth, and sherry. Cook, stirring constantly, until thickened. Add mushrooms, chicken and pimientos. Season to taste. Heat thoroughly. Fold in sliced eggs. Serve over beds of fluffy rice. Makes 6 servings.

The future housing market

Where are you most likely to find America's future housing growth markets?

Most are now middle-size cities in Southern States, according to the Chicago Title Insurance Co., one of the Nation's insurers of property title for homeowners and lenders.

John Pfister, vice president and manager of market research for Chicago Title, says the statistical impact of growth in smaller and medium size cities will be much more dramatic than in cities such as Houston, Dallas, San Antonio, Atlanta, Phoenix, Denver, Tampa and Miami that already have done a lot of growing.

A study by the title company reveals that smaller and medium size cities in Southern states are growing much more rapidly than those in other areas of the country.

The Chicago Title study analyzes and projects new residential housing starts for medium-size cities with populations between 500,000 and 1 million, and for smaller cities with populations between 100,000 and 499,000.

Projections are based on the number of new housing units to be built per 100 existing households over the next three years.

Between now and 1986, Fort Pierce, Fla., which will average 10 new units built for every 100 existing households, will rank first among the smaller growth cities (100,000 to 499,000 people). Myrtle Beach, S.C., with a 9.0 ratio will be next, followed by Fort Myers, Fla., 8.1; Virginia Beach, Va., 6.0; Sarasota, Fla., 5.9; the Cape Cod, Mass., area, 5.0; and Daytona Beach, Fla., 4.8.

Austin, Texas, with a 5.5 ratio, will be the leading growth market among medium size cities (500,000 to 1 million people). Chicago Title says, West Palm Beach, Fla., with 4.9 ratio, will be next, followed by Orlando, 3.9; Tucson, 3.5; Charlotte-Gastonia, N.C., 3.2; Raleigh-Durham, N.C., 3.2; and Oklahoma City, 3.1.

The U.S. average for this period will be 2.0. Not all cities are growing for the same reason. Some are attracting new industries while others are enticing a growing number of retirees, whose numbers will swell as the century rolls on.

Pfister says growth cities typically have a growing economic base, reasonably moderate housing costs, a significant amount of undeveloped land, adequate utility and water resources, a prodevelopment attitude and a willingness to aggressively promote growth.

Other characteristics that are frequently shared, he says.

Real estate academy opens

Century 21 Real Estate has announced the opening of a Real Estate Academy in new, expanded facilities at 5441 Virginia Beach Blvd. Don Clark, of Virginia Beach, has been named academy director and will be the primary instructor.

The Century 21 Real Estate Academy offers both day and evening schedules, and classes are open to anyone pursuing a career in real estate. The $135 registration fee covers textbooks and instruction in three areas—required principles of real estate, license exam preparation, and completion of basic instruments such as listing and sales contracts.

Clark reports that, "Our first month of operation at the new facility was a tremendous success, with 92 students completing the course. More and more people are pursuing the rewards of a real estate career as the housing market continues to make strong gains."

Gregg elected president

P. Porcher "Shay" Gregg, P. E., C.L.S., of Virginia Beach has been elected President of the National Society of Professional Surveyors (NSPS), which is the largest member organization of the American Congress on Surveying and Mapping (ACSM). ACSM is a nationwide professional society with more than 100,000 members in surveying, cartography and geodesy.

Gregg joined the firm of John M. Baldwin in 1955, became a partner in 1957, and was made president of the firm under the present name Baldwin and Gregg, Ltd. in 1970. Presently, he serves as consultant to the firm, maintaining regular office hours.

Gregg graduated with honors from North Carolina State University and attended the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration Advanced Management Program. He is a Registered Land Surveyor in Virginia, Maryland, Louisiana, Kentucky and Tennessee. Doctors certified

Dr. John A. Carlston and Dr. Harvey Davis of Virginia Beach have become two of eight allergists in the country to pass the certification exam of the American Board of Allergy and Immunology all four times the test has been given.

The joint board of the American Board of Internal Medicine and the American Board of Pediatrics first administered the voluntary certification exam in 1974, and has since offered the exam every three years. Allergists can take the exam either for first-time certification or for voluntary recertification.

The exam consists of an eight-hour written test. To be eligible to take it, doctors must have completed two years of allergy training in addition to their training in internal medicine or pediatrics. There are only three certified allergists in private practice in Virginia Beach and five in the Hampton Roads area.

Doctors Carlston and Davis have offices across the street from Virginia Beach General Hospital at 1704 Sir William Osler Drive. They are the authors of the Hay Fever chapter in the most recent edition of Conn & Conn's textbook "Current Diagnosis." Both are members of the Virginia Beach Medical Society, and both are professors at Eastern Virginia Medical School.

Wood ashes in the home garden

The nutrient content of wood ashes is variable, but in general they contain approximately 2% Phosphate, 5% potash, and small amounts of boron and other elements.

Wood ashes may be applied to the home garden to supply plant nutrients and reduce soil acidity. Application should be made only if the soil pH (acidity factor) is less than 7.0, based on a soil test. Suggested rates are 10-20 lbs. of wood ashes per 1,000 sq. ft. per year. A 10 qt. pail, filled to within 2" of the top, will contain about 5 lbs. of wood ashes so 2 to 4 pails may be used per 1,000 sq. ft.

Higher rates should be avoided because of potential plant toxicity problems. The soil should be tested after two years to check for changes in pH, phosphorus and potassium levels to determine if further wood ash applications should be made.

Wood ashes should not be applied in contact with germinating seeds or plant roots because of possible salt burn from the potash in the ash. To be on the safe side, wood ashes should be incorporated into the soil before planting using a rototiller or plow.

"I want to increase membership in the Soybean Association," said Cole. "Working together as a board we can see the association become more involved in critical issues facing soybean farmers—issues such as cargo preference, contract sanctity, and the 1985 farm bill."

Also elected during the meeting was Ray Thomas of Caret as vice president. Edward Taylor of Fredericksburg was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Soil surveys can help you

By D. D. Adams

USDA-Soil Conservation Service

The USDA-Soil Conservation Service in Chesapeake has soil information available that can help many different users of the land.

Some people assume that soils are all more or less alike, but this is not true. There are great differences in soil properties and these differences can occur within short distances.

Soils may be seasonally wet or subject to flooding. They may be too unstable to be used as a foundation for buildings or roads. Very clayey or wet soils are poorly suited to septic tank absorption fields.

A high water table makes a soil poorly suited to basements or underground installations. Soil surveys can help homebuyers or developers determine soil limitations or hazards that affect homesites.

They can help land use planners determine the suitability of areas for housing or onsite sewage disposal systems. They can help a farmer estimate the potential crop or forage production of his land.

They can be used to determine the suitability and limitations of soils for pipelines, buildings, landfills, recreation areas and many other uses.

Information on the soils in Chesapeake may be obtained from the local office of the USDA-Soil Conservation Service located in the Planetarium Building at Great Bridge. Phone 547-7172.

Duman Ford Continues Success

Mike Duman, Ford-Mercury Inc., located at 1600 N. Main St., continued its success this year by remaining the area's top volume dealer.

The highlight of the year was the presentation of Ford Motor Company's "Distinguished Achievement Award" to the company. This was the second consecutive year for the prestigious award.

The award is presented to dealerships who practice sound merchandising and quality service. The award is Ford's highest honor and was received by only 62 Ford dealers in the district.

When asked what contributed to the ongoing success of the dealership, Duman cited several factors.

"We try to offer customers the best of two worlds—the personal service and atmosphere of a local, small dealership combined with the inventory and financing of a large dealership. I personally try to meet as many of the customers as possible and assure them that we are not only interested in selling them a car or truck, but are also concerned with service and satisfaction after the sale," Duman said.

"We normally stock about $1 million worth of new cars and trucks and $300,000 worth of used vehicles. This enables our customers to choose from a wide selection and, in most instances, find a vehicle without shopping outside Suffolk.

"Financing is also a very important contributing factor to our success. We have six different sources for our customers to finance their purchases," Duman said.

"This enables us to offer the customer the monthly payment that fits his budget. This is usually an advantage that only a large metropolitan dealer has."

Of course, price is always a factor, he added.

"We are always prepared to offer our customer the best possible price on our vehicles; we will not be under sold. Our large used car business means we can offer top trade allowances.

"Last but not least, people have made us a success," Duman said.

"The receptiveness of the people of Suffolk and the surrounding areas and the efficiency of our employees have helped. Any organization is only as good as the people that work within it. Joe Battaglia does an excellent job as general manager. Peggy Cornett, with her staff in the office, keeps our records and customer accounts up to date.

"Ken McDaniel's performance since becoming business manager has been exemplary. He devotes his entire time to financing our customers' purchases. He specializes in obtaining financing, interest rates and payments that suit our customers' needs.

"Ralph Gray, Jake Jacobs, Keith Abraham, Hilton Delatch, Willie Strickland, Frank Jones, Arnie Van, and Frank

The employees of Mike Duman Ford

Peters provide an excellent sales staff. Parts customers are also familiar with the efficiency of Melvin Smith and Arthur Kee.

"Last and far from least, is the importance of the service department. Bobby Folks heads the department and is assisted by George Bell. Bobby was recently promoted to the service manager position. He brings with him 20 years' experience in the automotive field. The recent purchase of a modern technology engine analyzer aids in diagnosis and customer satisfaction.

"We feel the appointment of Bobby as service manager will further insure customer satisfaction with all facets of the service department. Without service after the sale, success in an automobile dealership is impossible."

Duman is proud of the success his dealership has shown through the first three years of operation. In closing, he said, "I would like to personally thank the people of Suffolk and the surrounding areas for another successful year, and hope we can be of service for many years to come."

Hartig gives up the tube

Now VP for Garcia

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

Following a successful 16-year career as a broadcast journalist, Charles E. Hartig walked away from the lights and cameras to become a Virginia Beach businessman. His new boss is millionaire investor and developer Edward S. Garcia.

Before being named by Garcia, president of ESG Enterprises, Inc., as vice president of special projects, Hartig served for three years as a local editorial director and news talk-show host. His last day at WVEC TV in Norfolk was Friday, March 9.

Hartig admits money was a consideration in switching jobs, but his principal motivation for accepting the newly created position runs deeper than just financial.

"Money was obviously a factor," Hartig, team was city champs while he was a member. Following high school, he attended college for a few months and dropped out. He went to the New York World's Fair to work heavy construction.

"I loved every minute of it," he recalls. "I grew up."

Making $50,000 a year, plus

When Eddie Garcia continues discussions with Staten Island officials to buy a nursing home and hospital, Charles Hartig will be there. It will be part of his new duties as vice president for special projects for ESG Enterprises, Inc., Virginia Beach.

Garcia said that in dealing with municipal, state, national and military officials, he expects Hartig to be helpful. Garcia is involved with many projects, including television, although details to most of them have not been disclosed. Garcia has said, however, that he plans to spend $8 million in New York remodeling the facilities, and is looking into developing some residential and commercial parcels in downtown New York.

Garcia said he knew Hartig's father (both families are from the Ocean View section of Norfolk) and has respected the Hartig family.

Garcia said Hartig earns in excess of $50,000 a year, plus expenses, plus incentives, bonuses, and shareholding in certain projects.

married with four children said. "But I think more than anything else, I'm the kind of guy who needs a fresh challenge from time to time; needs to be busy; needs to be involved. I was ready."

Of course, Hartig is aware of the negative perception some people have of Garcia.

"That is the biggest bunch of nonsense in the world," Hartig, who lives in the Ocean View section of Norfolk. "It is character assassination, pure and simple, generated by petty jealousy. Eddie Garcia is an honest man. He's a great father and a good husband. He also happens to be an extremely successful businessman."

"Everything that has been said about Mr. Garcia is pure and simple garbage," he added.

In the past, there have been newspaper articles indicating that Garcia has associated with alleged underworld figures. Garcia has denied any wrongdoing.

"I wish to God, that instead of all this Mafia (expletive deleted) that we hear all the time, somebody would have the courage to come out and talk about the meaningful things Eddie Garcia has done to help this city expand its tax base," Hartig said, "the people he's put to work. I don't think there's a person in this community, that when he or she was in trouble and came to Eddie Garcia for assistance, that Eddie turned him down. He's a very loving, a very generous and a very compassionate man. And I'll tell you for the record, I'm thrilled to be here."

Hartig, born in Jacksonville, Fla., moved to Norfolk at the age of three months. His mother was from Norfolk, his father from New York. After serving in the Navy, Hartig's father moved his family to Ocean View. Today Hartig and his wife June live in the same neighborhood in which he was raised.

Hartig graduated from Norfolk Catholic High School in 1963, leaving behind an active athletic career. He played football, baseball and basketball (quarterback, shortstop, guard). His basketball team won the state tourney and his baseball

WVEC sorry to see him go

According to Thomas P. Chisman, chairman of the board, WVEC tv, had Hartig stayed on staff he may have been promoted in the news department.

"I think he would have gone up in the news department," Chisman said. "Possibly to assistant news director. But I'm not running the station."

Chisman was president and general manager of WVEC until Jan. 30, 1984 when Belo Broadcasting, Inc., Dallas, Texas, purchased the station from Dunn and Bradstreet Co. in New York.

"I think we lost a very valuable employee," Chisman said. Chisman said Hartig hosted 13 Journal on Saturday evenings at 7:30 p.m.; and Conversation and Forum "from time to time."

"We thought a great deal of Charlie; he was very knowledgeable," Chisman said. "He saw another opportunity and direction. He had done what he wanted to do in broadcasting."

In New York, Hartig stayed in the YMCA and "begged people in Flushing to let me stay a few weeks until I got paid. A wonderful couple who owned a deli fed me for a couple of weeks until I got on my feet."

A year was enough of that and it was off to the small Catholic college in Alabama, St. Bernard's College. Hartig completed a double major, in education and in political science and history. By the time he finished college he was working full-time as a professional rock and roll disc jockey. Hartig said he held several jobs in college, in part to help finance the private education of his younger brother Dennis, editor of the Beacon.

A dean's list student, Hartig had always wanted to be a broadcast journalist. He knew after college, he was coming back to Norfolk and began making connections. He met Jim Mays, then news director of WTAR television and radio. He was hired in May, 1968, as a general assignments reporter although the only news experience he had was reading to listeners wire service reports.

"Apparently he took a liking to me because I had no experience at all," Hartig said. "None whatsoever."

A year later an opening occurred on the Norfolk City Hall beat, which Hartig described as "the most prestigious beat in the state." He received the job and held it for six or seven years, during which time he was active in contributing to the planning of Norfolk's waterfront, Granby Mall, Scope and Ghent. From 1976 and 1980 Hartig concentrated primarily on the 30-minute news documentary "Newsmakers." He also served for nine months as news director of WTAR radio. He yearned for television again and in Jan., 1981, went to work at WVEC as editorial director.

Hartig left his job quietly, unlike what happened when the station, under new owners, tried to fire anchorman Jim Kincaid. Public reaction contributed to his reinstatement. (See related story, this page).

Article published in The Sun takes state D.A.R. award

The article, "Beach DAR Members Travel Abroad" by Lillian B. Youell, vice-chairman of the NSDAR Treaty of Paris Bicentennial Committee, and published in the Nov. 9, 1983 issue of The Virginia Beach Sun has been selected as the best feature story in the Treaty of Paris category by the Virginia Daughters of the American Revolution and tied for first place in the Eastern District.

Promoting public awareness of the bicentennial celebration of this historic event has been a major emphasis of the National Society Daughters of the American Revolution during 1983-84. Mrs. Eugene T.

Connors, regent of Lynnhaven Parish Chapter accepted the award certificates at the 88th Virginia DAR Conference held in Roanoke last week. The National Society Treaty of Paris Certificate was then presented to Greg Goldfarb, editor, The Virginia Beach Sun.

Mrs. Connors and Mrs. Daniel Norton represented Lynnhaven Parish Chapter at the conference. Mrs. Norton was the personal page to the VADAR Public Relations chairman, Mrs. H. Harold Mays of Chester. Mrs. Youell also attended the opening session when Mrs. Carl Peterson was recognized as the Virginia Outstanding American History Teacher.

Council cleared to cablecast

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

Cable TV broadcasting of Virginia Beach City Council meetings has been given a clean bill of health.

City Attorney Dale Bimson reported to Council Monday afternoon at an informal session that airing the meetings does not violate the Fairness Doctrine of the Federal Communication Commission.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. last week asked for an opinion because incumbent Council candidates have exposure not available to other candidates. He said he wanted to know because he might be in the same situation in two years.

One program on which Anne Gimenez, a Council candidate appeared, was discontinued by Cox Cable until after the May 1 Councilmanic election because it would require equal time to be given to other candidates.

Bimson said that the broadcast of the Council meetings by Cox Cable TV would not invoke the Fairness Doctrine which requires equal opportunities for all candidates.

He said the city uses employees from the Public Information Office to cover the meetings but does not broadcast the meetings. Therefore it is not required to comply with the Fairness Doctrine. Cox Cable TV, however, airs the meetings live on Channel 29, but exercises no control over the format, broadcast, production or subject matter of the broadcast, he said, but merely provides the station by which the See COUNCIL, page 3

Inn plans $90,000 for repairs

For the second time in 10 years, the Princess Anne Inn carport has been demolished, without injuries, by drunk drivers. In the most recent January 14 incident, an employee's car was destroyed. The latest accident occurred just days after its owner, Scott Sterling, died of lung cancer. Sterling's son, Dawson, 28, is now president of the Princess Anne Inn, Inc., said it will cost $30,000 to repair the port, but also plans to spend another $60,000 to remodel the 60-unit 21 year-old motel. Work is expected to be completed by June 1. The motel, valued now at several million dollars, cost approximately $450,000 in 1963 when the inn was built.

An employee's car was destroyed during the last accident.

five minutes, are scheduled and refreshments will be served.

P.A. women entertain

The GFWC Princess Anne Woman's Club of Virginia Beach entertained at a reception at the Bow Creek Recreation Center in honor of Mrs. H. J. Stansell, past president of the Princess Anne club 1974-76 and President of the GFWC Tidewater District 1982-84.

Prior to serving as president, Mrs. Stansell served as second vice-president, first vice president and recording secretary of the Tidewater District.

The GFWC is the largest and oldest organization of volunteer women in the world with clubs in 46 countries and a overall membership of ten million.

The Virginia Federation, formed in 1907 and headquartered in Richmond is currently comprised of 416 clubs.

The Tidewater District has 40 clubs. Mrs. Arthur L. Richardson, President of the Princess Anne Woman's Club served as official hostess at the reception with Mrs. Carl K. Hoffman and Mrs. Thomas M. McCrory chairman.

Invitations were sent to all members of the Tidewater District clubs.

Mt. Trashmore to be capped by clay

The City of Virginia Beach will spend $300,000 to cap the "mountain" at Mt. Trashmore to minimize leachate problems.

A consultant's study authorized by City Council several months ago, finds that leachate from the landfill is contributing to the degradation of water quality at the park.

Consultants recommend that the mountain be capped - several feet of top soil is removed and a clay surface installed. Top soil is then placed over the clay surface to restore the hill.

At Council's informal session Monday afternoon, Councilman Harold Heischberger wanted to know whether "minimizing the problem" was the best solution.

City Manager Thomas H. Muehlenbeck said that the city want to go ahead with this work and then take tests again to see if the problem has been reduced.

Councilman H. Jack Jennings Jr. asked whether a polyethylene sheet would be used in the work.

Public Works Director Oral Lambert said that only the clay will be used. He said that either a synthetic material or the clay is recommended, but that polyethylene would add hundreds of thousands of dollars to the cost. He said clay as a substitute for polyethylene is most economical because it is available in Virginia Beach.

Council by a vote of 11-0 transferred the funds from a project now on hold - the International Parkway Bridge adjustments.

Exploring Country Inns

I can think of nothing more enjoyable than a weekend adventure filled with antique hunting and sight seeing, capped off by a night in a Victorian mansion or a restored plantation house. Unfortunately, it is difficult to keep track of all those country inns and bed and breakfast establishments. This is especially true since so many new inns are opening each week.

There is one place that can help sort through all the information available on inns...the Virginia Beach Public Library. By using the library's resources you will be able to get the address of that Charlottesville bed and breakfast service, find out how much a room with fireplace costs at the Red Fox Inn, or discover if dinner is served at Prospect Hill. Some of the best sources for this type of information are the various inn guide books owned by the library.

The granddaddy of all such directories is Country Inns And Back Roads by Norman Simpson. Simpson's highly personal book has been published annually since 1966. He includes both full service inns (lodging and all meals) and bed and breakfast inns throughout the U.S.

and Canada. The descriptions of each inn are usually so tantalizing that you will be packing your bags immediately. Important information (address, phone number, driving instructions, amenities, etc.) are always included. One warning, Simpson never lists lodging rates. Instead, the author encourages his readers to phone ahead for availability and prices.

Perhaps the most beautiful inn guides are published under the auspices of Architectural Digest. There are six or seven regional volumes in this "Country Inns of America" series. As one would expect from the publisher of Architectural Digest, each listing is accompanied by beautiful, evocative color photographs. The only drawback of this series is that each volume is not updated annually.

A third excellent guide book is The Complete Traveler's Country Inns of America series. This annual set of regional guides probably list more inns than any other source. The books include a general description of each inn, pertinent information (including costs), plus either a black and white photo or line drawing of the establishment.

I can personally recommend all three guides. Each one of them has provided me with wonderful "inn experiences." I will never forget the inn in Maryland where the innkeeper jumped up and down and shouted "You found us, you found us!" as we arrived. Or the shared bottle of wine, in front of a roaring fire, in a Virginia mountain inn. Or the lovely, peaceful setting of an inn, on a lake that time forgot, in central Pennsylvania. You too can create such memories by first stopping by the library and finding out more about inns.

Hartig hits the beach

"I'm not the type," Hartig said, noting that after three years on air he didn't even tell his listeners goodbye on his final telecasts. "I don't need it."

About three months ago Hartig began thinking about changing jobs. The fact that the station was changing ownership at the time, he says, was coincidental.

"I started thinking about it and decided that at my age I needed a change," Hartig said. "I was getting stale. I wanted a new challenge; something exciting to grab a hold of. So I started looking around."

Hartig heard that Garcia might want to talk to him, so he called the developer. Hartig, Garcia and his associate Michael Gelardi met for dinner at Wesley's.

"We talked and they mentioned some really exciting things to me," Hartig said. He left the dinner meeting "thoroughly impressed with their honesty, and their sincerity with what they wanted to do and with what they have already done in this community. And they simply said, 'if you're interested get back with us.'"

Hartig's background is not in developing, per se, and his job description has not been clearly defined. But as a journalist, Hartig developed certain public relations skills which may benefit Garcia.

"No, I'm not a real estate agent. Nor am I a lawyer and I'm not a contractor," Hartig said. "But I am a people-oriented kind-of person. I think the greatest asset I have, that God gave me, was an ability to deal with people. To talk to people."

"I've been very lucky in almost 16 years I was involved with broadcast journalism," Hartig continued. "I enjoy a very, very good reputation. I'm not being cocky; I worked hard for that reputation. I'm an honest kind-of guy. I have been fortunate to meet a lot of people; a lot of people that I can call on. In these areas I think I can help Eddie Garcia."

An additional asset, Hartig notes, was his constant involvement in the revitalization of downtown Norfolk.

Garcia sometimes finds himself, because of his big business transactions, in the media's eye. Because Hartig's brother is a newspaper editor, he thought twice about any possible conflicts. But not a third time.

"It crossed my mind," Hartig said, "but Dennis and I love each other very much. And as far as me being here with ESG Enterprises and Dennis as editor of the Beacon, it's purely a business relationship, if you can believe that. No, I'm not going to be calling him for inside information and I know damn well he won't be calling me for any inside information as to what's going on here. We're pretty much professional kind-of guys."

Hartig said he hasn't missed the camera, doesn't expect to, but says he will miss the company. But it's worth it.

"It's (my salary) a hell of a lot more money than I was making and it's probably more than I would ever expect to make in broadcast journalism in this market," he said. "And the potential beyond that is unlimited. This is the greatest opportunity I've ever had."

Hartig can only remember one time he was ever happier than now.

"I have not been this happy since my children were born."

Beach Council Actions

The following is a list of some of the actions taken by Virginia Beach City Council at its most recent meeting. Council members are: John A. Baum, Blackwater Borough; Nancy A. Creech, At-Large; Barbara M. Henley, Pungo; Harold Heischberger, At-Large; H. Jack Jennings, Lynnhaven; Louis R. Jones, Bayside; Robert G. Jones, At-Large; W. H. Kitchin, III, Virginia Beach; Reba S. McCoys suggested closing Dorset Avenue (Kempsville Borough) with two cul-de-sacs while leaving Euclid Avenue open as an alternative to a plan to improve the six-way intersection which also includes Cleveland Avenue.

City Attorney Dale Jimson submitted the opinion as requested last week by City Council that the cable-casting of City Council meetings with the Fairness Doctrine imposed by the U.S. Code. Jennings had asked for the opinion because of the concern that the exposure offered by the broadcasts to incumbent Council candidates is denied other Council candidates.

Jack Whitney, of the Planning Department, reported that the new flood plain maps prepared by the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers adds 22 percent more land area to the City's flood plain.

Public Works Director Oral Lambert said that use of a polyethylene seal on Mount Trashmore as part of the capping project for the park would cost hundreds of thousands of dollars more.

Crime Solvers

The Virginia Beach Crime Solvers program is seeking information about an armed robbery that occurred Jan. 5 at the BPG Gas Station at 4492 Shore Drive in Virginia Beach.

On that Thursday at 9:05 p.m., a man walked into the gas station and bought several food items. As he left the station and started walking across the parking lot, he suddenly stopped and walked back inside. After getting a package of cigarettes and the attendant asking if that was all, the man handed the woman a paper bag and, with a handgun pointed at her, demanded the money from the register. After putting the money into the bag, the attendant was forced to lie on the floor behind the counter. The suspect left and was last seen running toward the rear of the gas station.

The robber was described as a black male in his mid-20's, 5'9" to 6' tall, medium build with a short afro and no facial hair. At the time of the robbery he was wearing a waist length light tan leather jacket with dark brown cuffs, dark colored pants, and a white painter's cap with red lettering.

Anyone with information about this or any other robberies is asked to call Crime Solvers at 427-0000 and if an arrest is made, the caller will be eligible for up to a $1,000 reward.

Crime Solvers also pays cash for information about any crime and for information that leads to the arrest of wanted persons or the recovery of drugs or stolen property.

Callers never have to give their names or testify in court to be eligible for the rewards.

Bona fide newscast, bona fide news interview, bona fide news documentary (if the appearance of the candidate is incidental to the presentation of the subject or subjects covered by the news documentary), or on-the-spot coverage of bona fide news events (including but not limited to political conventions and activities incidental thereto).

Bimson said that the most applicable of these exemptions is the bona fide coverage of news events.

Putting your best foot forward became easier in 1792. That's when shoe sizes were introduced by James Smith of England.

Today's aerobic athletes can be stepping high, thanks to a new shoe designed just for them. It boasts a unique sole pattern featuring squares of natural gum rubber surrounding rubber circles called "hickies." These Asahi aerobics shoes, by Yamah, can give a more graceful movement to aerobics and reduce stress injuries as well.

When a Manchurian child is ready to learn how to walk, his parents often embroider a cat's head, whiskers and all, on the toes of his shoes. The parents hope that this will make their child as sure-footed as the cat.

Egg whites make great paste substitute

Painting Doors Or Windows - First coat all locks, door handles and hinges with a thin layer of Vaseline or petroleum jelly. After painting, it's very easy to wipe off and saves lots of work and worry.

Pancake Syrup, Making Your Own - Put one cup of granulated sugar, one cup of brown sugar and one cup of cold water in a small saucepan. Bring slowly to a boil, stirring occasionally. When all sugar is dissolved, add maple flavoring to suit your own taste.

Pancakes, Cooking - To prevent batter from sticking to the spoon, dip the spoon in fresh milk and it will drop off the spoon easily.

Paper Logs For Fires - First, roll up five or six old newspapers as tightly as possible. With wire, secure them with two or three bindings. Soak them thoroughly in very salty cold water. When they are completely soaked, about five minutes, remove them from the water and let the "logs" dry completely in the sunshine.

Paper Stuck On Wood - Using any sort of oil (cooking oil is very good), slowly soak the paper with a few drops at a time. Wait ten to fifteen minutes, then wipe off the paper and oil with a soft cloth moistened with white vinegar.

Parsley - Wash it in hot water and it is easier to chop and retains a lot more flavor, too.

The Hint Man

By CHUCK FAULKNER

Paste, Substitution - If no paste or regular adhesive of any kind is available, use the white of an egg.

Pastry - To keep pastry from sticking to your rolling pin, try rubbing flour on it before starting to roll the dough. If this doesn't work, place a piece of plastic on the pastry and roll through that. It works.

Add a few drops of pure lemon juice to your pastry mix to soften it up beautifully.

Patches On Clothing - After cutting out the patch to the required size, dip it in cold water. Flatten it out on the material, then sew it on. It won't have that wrinkled look when it is dry.

Broadway musical comes to Tidewater

Maureen J. Sigmund, owner and producer of the Tidewater Theatre, is pleased to announce her plans to produce the new Broadway musical, "Marilyn: An American Fable," which chronicles the life of the legendary movie star Marilyn Monroe in a musical theatre format. The new musical will open July 11th, and run through September 16th.

Ms. Sigmund recently completed negotiations in New York to be the first theatre to produce

"Marilyn" since it closed on Broadway in December. Productions are already being mounted for performances in both

Japan and Australia in 1985. In addition to securing the rights for the show, Ms. Sigmund has arranged for the loan of some of the set pieces

from the original Broadway production, including an Art Deco mobile star

dressing room.

The show's Broadway

producers and librettist

are planning to attend

opening night to see their show in its first production since it closed at the

Minskoff Theatre in New York.

TDT's Artistic Director, Ronald Stokes, will direct the production, and designer Ernest W. Schmidt will create the settings. Ms. Sigmund, Mr.

Stokes and Mr. Schmidt anticipate that "Marilyn"

will be one of the biggest locally produced shows to be presented in Tidewater.

Taste Unlimited

Some taste relocation

Peter Coe, owner of Taste Unlimited, has announced that the five-store gourmet food chain is moving two of its three Virginia Beach facilities to larger locations and significantly expanding the current offerings both.

The store at 638 Hilltop West Shopping Center, Taste Unlimited's first store and its location for the last 10 years, will move to newly renovated facilities at 1563 Laskin Road in September. The Taste Unlimited beach store, which is located in the Tiffany Shops at 37th Street and Pacific Avenue, will move to a newly constructed building next door on the corner of 36th Street in May.

Both moves create space that Taste Unlimited will lease, according to Coe. The 2,300-square-foot Hilltop store is in a prime location on the corner of the shopping center, and each of the two new facilities has approximately 1,500 square feet available for rent. Taste Unlimited is looking for a tenant to take over its lease at Hilltop West Shopping Center and two compatible tenants to share the new location on Laskin Road and the new building on 36th Street.

"The new Hilltop facility will be of a size and type that this area has never seen before," said

Coe in announcing the changes. "It will be a full-service gourmet shop with islands for specialty products of all types including produce, candy, coffee and wine. Just about the only items it won't carry will be fresh meats and seafood."

Scheduled to open in September the superstore will be located across the road from Hilltop Shopping Center, next to Thunderbird Bowling Lanes. Its 5,000-square-foot space is more than twice the size of the Hilltop location; and is being renovated to include corporate offices, a warehouse and 3,000 square feet of retail space. The Hilltop store is already the largest gourmet store in the area and its relocation will make it one of the largest in the Southeast.

"We want to greatly expand our product line, and we need larger storage and more office space," said Coe. "Hilltop just doesn't allow us to make this type of expansion."

Coe added that the Laskin Road facility will allow Taste Unlimited to consolidate its corporate offices, which are currently scattered between the Hilltop location and the two Norfolk stores at Colley Avenue and Main Street.

The move from the Tiffany Shops at the beach is being made for similar reasons, according to Doug Turek, Taste Unlimited's general manager, who is coordinating the logistics of the two relocations.

"Space is the bottom line. We really need to expand the store at 37th and Pacific to bring it in line with the traditional Taste Unlimited product line, and we can't do this in our current building. The Tiffany Shops are a great location and we like being there, so we decided to put up our own building next door."

The new facility, which is expected to open in late May, will enlarge Taste Unlimited by about 40 percent and will allow the store to offer a greater variety of items, including an expanded wine department.

Along with the two Virginia Beach expansions, Taste Unlimited is also enlarging its Colley Avenue store from a 25-foot-wide store to a 45-foot-wide one. Turek explained that the store will knock out a wall and take over 20 feet of the adjacent Cofers Inc., which is moving to new facilities.

When finished, the widened store will house an expanded wine department and offer a limited selection of specialty produce. Construction is scheduled to be complete by April 1.

Sears begins conversion

Sears will begin converting its Virginia Beach store next month into a store of the future as part of a $1.7 billion program, it was announced today by Charles J. Ruder, General Manager of the Virginia area retail stores. The store of the future utilizes new sales floor layout and merchandise presentation concepts, moving product lines within departments and adding new computer-aided customer service systems.

The 18-year-old store will remain open during construction which is scheduled to require six months, Ruder said. The remodeling is part of a $1.7 billion, five-year remodeling and expansion program, with emphasis on converting some 600 existing stores into the company's new store of the future design.

"We have literally torn apart the store on paper and then reassembled the more than 730 lines that comprise it into a new selling environment," Ruder added. Among the improvements will be a computer system which will cut in half the time it takes to handle transactions at the cashier.

"After remodeling, we want our customers to say 'It's Sears, but it's different.'"

Ruder said Sears will continue to be the "only true department store—not in the sense of higher prices, but in the contest of offering a broad array of goods—softlines and hardlines alike. We have developed a true department store—the one place where 36 million American families who regularly shop at Sears can find everything they want and need—hardlines, appliances, home fashions, home entertainment items, automotive goods, apparel as well as financial services."

Real Estate News

By Roger G. Pyle

This week I'm going to depart from my favorite subject of Real Estate and talk about politics - a dangerous subject.

A personal note - In the 1950's the United States Navy took some of the more good looking and talented college students who had completed 2 years of college directly into Flight Training - (that's the way I like to tell the story - actually they were using a lot of pilots in Korea and they lowered their standards). The Navy, in the words of Thomas Wolf, "is still interested in quality in its Officer Corps" could not bear to see us uneducated, and most of us returned to college and received a diploma. The Government degree that I received from the Naval Postgraduate School brings me back to the subject. Political events are very interesting and enlightening if you really analyze and think about them.

I am a devout non-artisan, independent voter, not married to either party and this column is not designed to reflect any political bias.

Watching the recent Primaries, it occurs to me that the Democratic process is alive and well in this country - and beautiful! Hugh Sidey's article on page 20 of TIME March 12, rounds the clear, sweet ring of truth. He says, in part, "This is a season of humility for many of us in the business of measuring the progress of the men battling their way toward the White House. Gary Hart was not supposed to win in New Hampshire because the creators of the modern political spectacle-the consultants, the pollsters and the media-wrote the script, assigned the parts and hailed the preordained result before the vote. The people were told what was going to happen, but they were never properly consulted." "The polling booth is everyman's temple, unassailable by blandishments from the outside world if the person so chooses. In these voters can be giant killers. In New Hampshire they were."

It is gratifying to see the American voter wield his and her awesome power so that smug, tidy predictions are confounded. Do they really like a candidate named Hart? Or are they simply rejecting a candidate named Mondale?

It is truly wonderful to see voters rejecting racial, union and other guidelines and using free and independent thinking to elect the best candidate. I believe that the American people are capable, even willing to make great sacrifices - but they must know why and know that the cause is just. Many politicians have never understood that.

Who knows, with the kind of free and independent thinking demonstrated by voters in the early primaries, maybe someday we'll even be able to keep them from selling us out after they're elected.

Where to turn in case of emergencies

In the event of a disaster of major emergency, such as a hurricane, the City of Virginia Beach Emergency Services Office will be at the scene with the most modern of Mobile Emergency Operations Centers.

This vehicle, formerly a Mobile Reading Laboratory, is designed to function as a point of command to coordinate major emergency or disaster operations. This mobile unit supplements the permanent Emergency Operations Center at the Municipal Complex. It is designed to handle City and City/Military operations and is the first Mobile Emergency Operations Centers with such capabilities in the Commonwealth of Virginia.

The Mobile EOC can also be utilized by other cities with a need for such a command post. It can be used for large fires, hostage situations, plane crashes, etc.

The three-compartment interior of this vehicle was built by Master Firefighters from the Virginia Beach Fire Department. The first compartment is a Communications Section containing:

- *three 32-channel VHF radios for local government;
- *two 12-channel VHF radios;
- *two 2 channel VHF military radios;
- *and one VHF Converter/Charger/Power Supply

These radios can communicate the Virginia Beach City units; other Tidewater cities; Virginia State Police; Police, Fire and Rescue units in the State of North Carolina and NAS Oceana.

The second compartment is an Operations Room where various agency heads and officials could confer, coordinate and control resources involved in disaster operations. This section contains a blackboard, bulletin board, mobile telephone and adequate shelf and storage space for reference materials and manuals.

The last compartment in the vehicle contains a refrigerator, cooking facilities, a sink with hot and cold running water and toilet facilities.

The vehicle can operate independently of any ongoing outside support, as it is equipped with a 15 kilowatt generator capable of powering all electrical systems simultaneously. It will be maintained in an operationally ready status and, when needed, it will be transported and placed into operation by Fire Department personnel. Once on location, the vehicle can be set up and placed into operation in approximately 15 minutes.

To date, $33,000 has been spent on the renovation and equipping of this vehicle of which $19,000 has been City funds and $14,000 Federal funds.

PPO system discussed

Chesapeake General, DePaul, and Virginia Beach General Hospitals are jointly pursuing the development of an alternative delivery system, a Preferred Provider Organization (PPO). The announcement was made today by Donald S. Buckley, President, Chesapeake General Hospital; Sister Virginia, Administrator, DePaul Hospital; and W. Earl Willis, President-Chief Executive Officer, Virginia Beach General Hospital.

A PPO is an arrangement in which physicians and hospitals contract with group purchasers of health care (employers, union trust funds, insurers, and similar groups) to provide health care on a negotiated fee-for-service basis to groups of employees or members and their dependents. The planned organization represents the first time in Tidewater that three independent hospitals and their medical staffs have joined in an effort of this type and magnitude.

Parent's rights discussed

Dr. Gary Bettis, a popular lecturer in the library system, will present a program on parent's rights on Monday, April 2, at 7:30 p.m. in the Kempsville Area Library. During the program, Dr. Bettis will address the problems of parents trying to live with out-of-control adolescents or young adults. He will suggest that parental "failure" is not the cause of adolescent rebellion, the parents have, at the least, a right to cooperation and common courtesy from their offspring, and while parents may feel helpless, in fact they can develop strategies to regain control of their home and children.

Registration in advance for this program is necessary and can be made by calling the library at 495-1016.

Against Darwinism discussed

Author William R. Fix will discuss the latest scientific evidence against Darwinian evolution at 3 p.m., Sunday, April 1 at the A.R.E., 67th Street and Atlantic Avenue, Virginia Beach. Admission is $3 per person, or $5 per couple.

Child abuse lecture set

"It Shouldn't Hurt to be a Child" is the theme chosen by the Virginia Beach Multi-Discipline Team on Child Abuse and Neglect to observe National Child Abuse Prevention Month in April. During the week of April 16, this team will staff a display booth at Lynnhaven Mall in conjunction with the Society's league Against Molestation (S.L.A.M.). Several Tidewater cities will participate in these displays.

For further information contact Joanna Parsick, Department of Social Services, at 486-7223.

Travelling through the solar system

The Virginia Beach City Public Schools Planetarium public program for April will be "Travelling Through The Solar System."

This program takes the audience on a space ship tour of the solar system, using actual photographs whenever available, and artists' renditions based on current scientific information.

Planetarium hours are: Sundays, 7 to 8 p.m., April 1, 8, 15, and 29; and Tuesdays, 7 to 8 p.m., April 3, 10, 17, and 24.

There will be no program on Easter Sunday, April 22. Telephone the main office at Plaza Junior High School, 486-1971, for reservations. Admission is free. Children under age 12 may be refused admission unless accompanied by a mature person.

Steps for organic gardening

Building up the fertility of the soil is one of the keys to successful organic gardening.

John Luna, Virginia Tech Extension entomologist who has been an organic gardener for over 15 years, listed some techniques for promoting fertility that will help make a successful organic home vegetable garden.

Much of the general information about gardening is the same for all gardening, organic or otherwise, said Luna. Organic gardeners should follow the recommendations about garden location, turning of the soil, spacing, irrigation, and harvesting, that are part of general gardening.

The organic gardener should have a compost pile to help keep organic matter decomposing, and use it in the soil.

Start one with a small pile of organic matter such as a bushel of grass clippings, add a layer of soil, and a layer of household organic garbage. Everytime a layer of garbage is added, add another layer of soil to help in the decomposition process. Occasionally mix the pile thoroughly. After a month or so, start a new pile next to the old one, layering some of the old compost into the new pile. Then use the old compost in the garden to increase organic matter content.

A first step in any garden is to have the soil tested. Information on how to do it is available at Virginia Cooperative Extension Service offices throughout the state. Soil test results include specific information on what nutrients are missing from the soil. Particularly important in establishing a garden is getting the soil pH between 6.0 and .65 by using recommended quantities of lime.

Organic gardens are planted in the usual way. Once the sprouts are about one inch high, Luna suggested that the organic gardener hoe or pull out all the visible weeds.

"This timely cultivation is essential," he said. It is generally better to allow this first flush of weeds to come up and use the hoe to get them out of the garden before putting in a mulch. Place a mulch up to the base of the garden plants to control the weeds that are still in the soil.

As the vegetables start to grow, the organic gardener needs to be aware of the insect problems as they start.

There are ways to control insects in an organic garden, including biological controls and insecticides derived from plants such as pyrethrum and rotenone. Luna suggested that organic gardeners keep such a substance on hand.

Gardeners should learn about the insects that live in the garden, including the amount of insects that can be tolerated before too much damage is done. One philosophy of organic gardening is to use insecticides only when necessary to prevent unacceptable damage.

Continue to work the garden through the growing season. Irrigate when necessary, keep the pests under control, and the weeds eliminated.

In the fall, Luna suggested the organic gardener plant a winter cover crop. "After cleaning up the plant residues left in the garden, and putting them in the compost heap, plant a cover crop of rye grain mixed with hairy vetch," he said.

Today College Counts

By John Marshall

Computer camp builds minds and bodies

This is the time of year when curriculum planners debate how to allocate the funds to the various disciplines on their agendas.

One of the items most agendas will include is a program in computers. One area school system has a computer program designed to begin in the third grade and continue through the twelfth grade.

The fact is that computers are here—not just in big business or in the boss' office, but at school and in the home. The thought of a child "speaking" fortan or cobal frightens many people, but even more frightening is the media report that children will fall behind in school because they do not know how to use a computer.

Fortunately, there is a way to help students get a head start in the world of computers without sacrificing their precious playtime or time out of doors.

The Office of Continuing Education on the Chesapeake Campus of Tidewater Community College and the City of Chesapeake Department of Parks and Recreation have designed a summer Computer Camp to teach seventh, eighth, and ninth grade students to use a computer, and provide supervised recreational activities.

The camp is two weeks long and runs from 8:30 a.m. until 5:30 p.m., Monday through Friday. Students will spend the mornings in the classroom learning computer concepts and specific problem solving techniques in math, logic and text.

Students will also learn to write and run simple programs that print and calculate in basic language. A qualified professional recommended by Tidewater Community College will instruct all of the computer classes.

Afternoons will be filled with planned recreational activities including swimming, hiking, sports, and weekly field trips. All recreational activities will be supervised by a professional from the Parks and Recreation department.

There are two separate sessions of Computer Camp. The first session begins June 11 and ends June 22; and the second session begins June 25 and ends July 6. (Camp will not meet on July 4).

Registration for Computer Camp is in progress and will extend through April 26, but enrollment is limited; so, register your child soon. The fee for each camp is $75 and while it does include the cost of instruction and equipment, it does not include lunch or field trips.

Give your child a chance to build his mind and body for the future this summer by calling the Parks and Recreation department at 487-8841 or 547-6292 for two weeks of fun and learning.

Remember, Today College Counts!

Cooperative efforts

It's a bloomin' project

By Greg Goldfarb
Editor

This spring, as brilliant Marigolds stretch to kiss the warm sun, their petals lightly painted by the salty seabreezes, visitors to the Norwegian Lady Plaza at 25th Street and the boardwalk will notice something new: four brick flowerboxes.

The 10 by 28-foot boxes were built by eight seniors from the city's Vocational Technical Education School on North Landing Road. Under the supervision of masonry instructor Herb Smith, the students began the project last fall. They just recently completed it.

"It was a super experience for them," said Smith, noting that in class reusable mortar is used. "They wouldn't get this experience any other way."

Funding for the beautification project was provided by the Cavalier Garden Club, which donated $2,321.90 to the city from proceeds raised during the club's Auction-Brunch held at the Cavalier-on-the-hill.

Plaza worth $315,000

The Norwegian Lady Plaza is actually the ocean end of 25th Street.

If the plaza, approximately 60' by 150', was available on the commercial market it would be worth $315,000 according to the Commissioner of Revenue's office. That's at an assessed rate of $35 per square foot.

Anti-litter run set

A five-mile Anti-Litter Hike will be held in Virginia Beach on the beach from 1st to 68th Streets on Saturday, April 28, beginning at 10:30 a.m.

New housing

The Virginia Beach Office of Housing and Community Development and Oglesby/Arnold Realty, Ltd. invites the public to attend ground breaking ceremonies for the Seabridge Landing Townhouses at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, April 3, at the corner of Virginia Beach Boulevard and Birdneck Road.

Norwegian ceremonies

The Ladies Auxiliary to the Virginia Beach Borough Volunteer Fire Department will hold its Twenty Second Annual Norwegian Lady Ceremony on Saturday, March 31 at 2 p.m. at 25th Street and the oceanfront at the Norwegian Lady Statue.

Ninety-three years ago on March 27, 1891 off the coast of Virginia Beach the Norwegian Bark Dictator sank taking the lives of five crew members and Captain Jorgensen's beloved wife and son. The day after the shipwreck a Mr. Crittender, manager of the Princess Anne Hotel, had the figurehead retrieved from the sea and placed in the sand by the hotel with the figurehead facing the sea as a memorial to those who perished.

Two Norwegian Lady statues were made in Norway. One was donated to the people of Virginia Beach which faces Moss Norway and her sister statue is in Moss Norway facing Virginia Beach to watch and protect over all who sail the sea.

The storytellers spin a tale about the Captain of the Dictator returning to Virginia Beach on March 27 to cast flowers on the water in memory of his wife, son and crew members.

The Ladies Auxiliary pledged to carry on this memorial for the city of Virginia Beach. The Auxiliary has kept this pledge and has made many meaningful friendships with Norwegian people living in this area.

Lainhart lands title

By Dave Miller
VBS Correspondent

A full house of fight fans were on hand for the recent monthly Pro-Am Boxing Card held at Rogue's.

In the main event Ric Lainhart of Virginia Beach faced Pete Harris of Lynchburg for the vacant Virginia Cruiserweight Title in a ten round matchup.

Lainhart had the fight under control until the last round when Harris connected with a solid punch that rocked Lainhart. It was not enough to take the fight and Lainhart scored a ten-round decision over Harris and walked away with the title. The crowd-pleaser of the card was a four-rounder featuring welterweights Tony Rios and Wayne McClanan. The fighters are both from Virginia Beach and the rivalry between the two was an interesting matchup.

Rios was the better boxer and won the bout by decision handing McClanan another loss.

In other action popular Speedy Gonzales outclassed Darnell Jacobs of Hampton earning an easy four-round win.

Virginia Beach's Curtis Bush was set to meet Joe Everett of Norfolk but the fight was called because of weight difficulties. Bush was then set to face Lynn Robinson of Hampton but Robinson failed to show. The crowd was not told of the situation and Bush's fans waited without explanation, for a fight not coming. Bush has had only one of three fights set at Rogue's make it to the ring. He is hopeful of better results on the next card.

Council members wait tables for charity

By Lee Cahill
City Council Reporter

If you happen to be at the Raven or the Golden Dragon on April 18 for dinner, you may notice something familiar about the waiters and waitresses.

That one is a dead ringer for State Sen. Joseph Canada! And over there—doesn't she look like City Councilwoman Meyera Oberndorf?

You'll be right! On that night the city's celebrities, state legislators, City Council members and others will be waiting tables and looking for large tips.

It will all be for the benefit of the Prevention of Child Abuse Committee.

City Council received its invitation to serve Monday evening from Richard Browner, Sue Gibson and Tom Fisher Monday evening.

Gibson, who founded the Virginia Chapter of the National Committee for the Prevention of Child Abuse, said that the first event of this kind was held in Norfolk last year when $2,100 was raised. Similar events are being held in major Virginia cities during the second week of April.

The money, which will include a portion of the restaurants' receipts, will be used to fund an educational program on "Pride in Parenting."

A special "tee" shirt will be awarded to any diner who tips $25 or more.

City asking state for highway project consideration

The City of Virginia Beach is asking the State Department of Highways and Transportation (VDHT) to consider three additional projects in its six-year improvement program. The State also is being asked to study the Southeastern Freeway concept which is among five projects more directly controlled by the state. Requests will be made at the VDHT preallocation hearings at 10 a.m. March 29 in the auditorium of the Suffolk District Office.

Beauty

Through the combined efforts of the city's landscape services department, the vocational-education center and the Cavalier Garden Club, Virginia Beach is a little bit more beautiful.

The scene is at 25th Street and oceanfront, at the grassy Norwegian Lady Plaza.

For years, many sandled tourists, and barefoot locals have spent hours lounging on the lawn by the sea, oftentimes listening to live entertainment provided by Virginia Beach. The small plaza will be covered this summer with brightly colored blankets and towels, and because there are no tall westerly obstructions, the sun always shines on the area long into the evening.

This year, beachgoers will be surprised to find in the plaza four new planter boxes, which by this summer, should be full of fulgent flowers. The garden club donated money for materials, and the city provided the manpower and knowledge. The finished product is another testimonial to civic and city cooperation which will endure for years.

In addition to adding beauty, the new planter boxes are expected to provide seating for 150 people. Certainly, no one will object to that.

If the city had its way, and the money, it would beautify every unadorned nook and cranny in the growing resort city. But it doesn't. Consequently, the city and the community receives a real boost when an active civic group, such as the Cavalier Garden Club, unselfishly gives of itself to help the city to keep Virginia Beach green and lovely.

Don't think that the Cavalier Garden Club is the only group in the city which undertakes beautification projects. There are other projects, for example, which may not beautify an area viewed by as many people who will see the flowers at 25th Street. But whether the other groups beautify a park, a walkway, the entrance to a neighborhood or just their front lawns, it adds to the overall positive environmental aura of Virginia Beach.

The next time you take the time to stop and smell the flowers, inhale deeply, and while you're exhaling think about what goes into keeping beautiful a world that is slowly being devoured by various forms of pollution.

Virginia Beach voters, provided they are registered, should go to the polls and vote in this spring's May 1 councilmanic election. This is the most direct way of asserting your will in regard to matters appearing before city council.

Don't think that your vote, like a lonely cry in the forest, will not be heard. Election results are analyzed again and again. Reporters, candidates and political observers carefully study the results to discern voter trends and patterns. Often, candidates are selected by their parties based upon parity with voter interests. Consequently, your candidate may win or lose by a small margin. But that small margin gives validity to the candidate, his or her ideas and his or her constituency. And the candidate which may win or lose this time, could also win or lose at a later time.

Changing the face of a city, or city council, does not come overnight. Political ties and interests run deep. But the public, in general, does not believe in partisan politics. It understands it, but prefers not to get involved. Getting involved in evaluating candidates and their positions on the issues takes time and energy. But it's worth it.

Vote, not just for a name or a face, but vote for ideas, actions and a belief that your vote is for the candidate who has the best interest of the entire city at heart.

Thank you for article; let the truth prevail

Editor, The Virginia Beach Sun:

This is just a short note to express my gratitude for the fine article which appeared in The Virginia Beach Sun on March 21.

I thought you did an outstanding job of capturing my enthusiasm for the new venture which I have recently undertaken.

I also appreciate your "courage" in letting the readers know how I feel about Mr. Edward Garcia and his continuing commitment to make this community an even better place in which to live. The public is always better served when the truth, not rumor and innuendo, dominate the front page.

Although I have been working in Virginia Beach only a short period of time, I am thoroughly impressed with the quality of The Virginia Beach Sun. The newspaper performs an outstanding public service, one that I am confident your readers appreciate.

I look forward to learning much more about Virginia Beach and her people. This is a wonderful community, and I am proud to be here.

Again, I thank you very much and continued success.

Booksale April First

By Carolyn Caywood

Over the past year, hundreds of Virginia Beach residents have generously donated books they no longer wanted to the public libraries. Cookbooks, textbooks, self-help books, fiction, and many other subjects both popular and specialized have come singly or by the boxful. Some have helped fill out the library collections while others await a new home on April 1.

From noon to 5 p.m. at the Pavilion that day they will be for sale, mostly for a quarter to fifty cents. Retired library books will also be among the thousands available. The funds raised will go to support the many projects of the Friends of the Virginia Beach Public Library.

While the fund raising is, of course, important, the real fun of the book sale lies in discovering special treasures. Sometimes it's a book you first read long ago, or one that sounded interesting but you've never been able to locate before. It might be a book you know nothing about, but it looks intriguing, and for a quarter why not take a chance.

Often there are very old books with nostalgic inscriptions on the flyleaf. It is possible to find a first edition or a set of classics. The information in a book may be dated, but it can be fascinating to see how things have changed. One of my favorites is a 1939 world atlas. It wouldn't do anymore for studying geography, but it makes that period of history come alive.

Used books are a great way to build a child's home library. A popular book that is too worn to endure public circulation can still be enjoyed by a family. At these prices it's even reasonable to buy a book just to cut out the pictures.

If you haven't been to a used booksale before, there are a couple of cautions. It's best to wear old clothes because books are magnets for dust. It is always a good idea to bring something to carry your books in, but if you forget there will be boxes available.

Whatever you do, don't be an April Fool and miss this bargain-hunter's dream.

What is a teacher?

She teaches reading to help us start succeeding.
She's not very mean, but very very keen.
She likes my friend Matt, when I order two meals she thinks I'll get fat.
She's very nice, I wonder if she likes pudding rice?
She likes a kitty cat, but I don't think she likes a full-grown rat.

She likes furry rabbits, but she doesn't like bad pencil holding habits.
When we have a play, it's a special day.
She would rather teach, than go to the beach.

Off The Record

An executive problem

"Excuse me." President?

"Yes, Mr. President?" "Where do I go to the restroom while we're visiting this factory?" "I don't know sir, I'll check."

"Oh thank you, I think I'll just sit down here a spell."

A short time later.

"Mr. President?"

"Yes?"

"I've been informed that you may use the restroom here, but first the facility must be inspected. Is that satisfactory, Mr. President?"

"I see. What are you inspecting?"

"The bathroom, sir."

"Why?"

"We'll check for bombs, sir."

"I see. Yes, I do recall that Israeli Ambassador who was smothered in gefillte fish while he was taking a bath. There aren't any horses around here are there?"

"I don't know sir, but we'll check."

"Thank you, I'd sure hate to spend my last days..."

"I understand sir."

"Well, what now?"

"They'll let us know when the inspection is completed."

"That's fine. We really shouldn't rush these things. I remember once, I was in the bathroom at the White House. Well, one of the staff's children had some salamanders. I don't need to tell you what happened when Nancy went in there one day and found a pair of eyes looking up at her."

"No sir."

"How long now? Don't I have to be somewhere soon?"

"No sir."

"Oh. Well, what can we do?"

"Do you like Irish jokes?"

"Oh yes. I love those. Tell me one using the name Tip."

"Well, it seems there was this Irishman and this Swede. And...excuse me sir. Go ahead. This is station one. Yes. I see. I see."

"What is it? What is it? May I go to the john now?"

"No sir. They found some anti-American graffiti on the bathroom stall walls. We're waiting now for them to scrape it off."

"Oh yes. I see. Damn, we can't get rid of those Rushies no matter where we go."

"No sir."

"By the way, where should I go? I can't wait for ever."

"No sir. Hold on one second. Hello? This is station one. Has the restroom been cleared yet?"

"Oh Steve?"

"One second sir. Yes. Yes. It didn't. It didn't."

"Steve, what did Jimma do when he had to use the head and couldn't get to one."

"He used to have us carry a sack of peanut hunks."

"Oh. I see. Are there any of those around?"

"No sir."

"Well, I just can't understand why they can't keep those salamanders in a cage."

Opinion

By Greg Goldfarb

School prayer

All this talk about prayer in schools is superfluous.

For people who pray out loud in the morning, and who, it is presumed, didn't get their praying in at home, schools could establish chapels in the schools or on school grounds. This would allow a time and a place for those who want to pray out loud to do so without putting pressure on the children who don't pray out loud every day.

Some businesses use a similar system.

When the children, faculty and staff have finished the prayer, or praying, they return to class.

program. The three additional projects which also would be financed under the Urban fund are:

•Constitution Drive - Phase II: for the construction of a four-lane divided facility from Bonney Road to Edwin Drive, crossing Route 44.

•Independence Boulevard - Phase IV: for the widening of Independence Boulevard from Jeanne Street to Haygood Road to provide a six-lane divided arterial highway.

•Ferrell Parkway - Phase IV: for the construction of a four-lane divided facility from Landstown Road to General Booth Boulevard.

Lambert presented the proposals at a City Council work session Monday evening.

He said that Chesapeake administrators were in accord with improving Interstate 64, one of the five requested projects under state control. This calls for the widening of Interstate 64 to a six-lane facility from I-64/I-264 interchange to the Chesapeake City limits.

Southeastern Freeway would provide a four-lane facility from Route 44 to I-64 in Chesapeake.

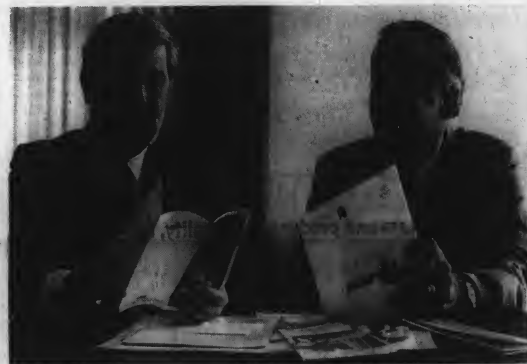

The other state projects are:

•Route 44 - Independence Boulevard southbound off-ramp at Independence Boulevard in the Baxter Road area.

•Toll Road bridge widening over Independence Boulevard to accommodate eight lanes of traffic on Independence Boulevard.

•Toll Road eastbound off-ramp - Witchduck Road: the reconstruction or modification of the off-ramp to facilitate the heavy traffic flows.

Projects already included in the plan are Wayside Bridge, Shore Drive Bridge over Eastern Shore Railroad, Lake Smith Spillway Bridge, Princess Anne Road - Phase III, Newtown Road - Phase II, Haygood Road, Great Neck Road - Phase II, First Colonial Road - Phase III, Constitution Drive - Phase I, Virginia Beach Boulevard - Phase I, Virginia Beach Boulevard - Phase II, and Virginia Beach Boulevard Phase III.

A quarter has 119 grooves on its circumference.

One slice of bread makes about a third of a cup of dry bread crumbs or three-quarters of a cup of soft bread crumbs.

Grape leaves help make crisper pickles

Peas, Cooking - If using fresh peas, boil the pods as well. It adds to the real pea flavor.
Peaches - After peeling peaches, dip them, whole or sliced, in fresh milk and no discoloring will occur.
Pecans, Removing The Shell - Cover pecans with boiling water and let them stand till cold, then gently tap or hammer the small end of the shell.

Pewter, Cleaning - Apply a past of whitening and linseed oil. Clean thoroughly, then wash in warm, soapy water. Rinse well, then polish with a soft cloth or chamois. Or apply toothpaste to a damp soft cloth dampened with denatured alcohol.

Note: Never use soap on ivory. It yellows the keys. If the keys are plastic, any type of toothpaste is a good cleanser. Simply rub it on, scour with the fingertips, then, as it dries, polish with a soft cloth.

Pickled Beets - They will keep twice as long and will not go soft if you add a pinch or two of dry mustard to the vinegar in the jar. Give it a little shake to mix it.

Pickling And Preserving - Never use copper, brass, zinc utensils in canning. Glass is best, but unchipped enamel is also good. Use whole spices if possible; ground spices may darken your preserves. Use non-iodized salt. It's the best by far. Store in a cool, dark place. For crisper pickles, put a green grape leaf in the bottom of the jar and another leaf in the top of the jar just before sealing.

The Old Country brings to life Europe's best

The quaint charm of 17th century European villages, combined with the foods of different lands and a variety of entertainment, bring the fun of a European experience to life in America at Busch Gardens, The Old Country.

The theming is the backdrop for one of the most action-packed and exciting parks in America, with legendary rides such as the "Loch Ness Monster," double-looping coaster and live concerts by some of the biggest names in the entertainment industry today.

The journey through The Old Country begins in the English hamlet of Banbury Cross, which reflects the authentic flavor of Europe complete with a Big Ben clock tower, a variety of shops featuring English pastries and gifts, and the Squire's Gallery restaurant.

The main attraction is Shakespeare's Globe.

Theatre where the "Mark Wilson Magic Show" is performed several times a day. This unique show features variations on illusions made famous by some of the world's greatest magicians, such as Houdini.

Not far from England is Heatherdowns, the Scottish home of the fierce "Loch Ness Monster," one of the most renowned roller coasters in the world. Ranking as the park's most popular ride, the spine-tingling, double-looping serpentine coaster looms 13 stories high and carries riders at speeds up to 70 m.p.h.

For the more tame-hearted, Scotland also houses the famous Anheuser-Busch Clydesdales. They can be seen in their stables or grazing on the lawn where they can be easily photographed.

Stopping first in France, visitors can discover a variety of food as well as big name entertainment at the new 5,200 seat Royal Palace Concert Theatre.

There is more music next door at the Canadian Folk Palladium where the "Good Time Country" show is a featured attraction.

France and neighboring New France also offer open-air cafes, European-style auto racing on "Le Mans" race course and a rousing white water trip down "Le Scoot" flume ride.

Around the bend from France is Hastings. The newest addition in this area is the "Threadneedle Faire" medieval game village. Here, visitors can test their abilities in ancient games of skill such as cross bows, the antler toss and Jacob's ladder.

In Germany's Rhinefeld village, visitors can shop for authentic steins and Hummel figurines, sample freshly made chocolate and candies, ride an antique handcarved carousel with 36 prancing stallions, or take a relaxing cruise down the Rhine River.

The Bavarian way of life comes alive in Oktoberfest. At the 2,000-seat "Das Festhaus," visitors not only find an enormous selection of German foods and rich desserts, but an oompah band and dancers performing on a two-tier, ed center stage in the midst of the incredible festival hall. The colorful Burgermeister leads the audience in German toasts and songs as they raise their mugs to join in the fun.

Italy's festive streets outside the Piazza lead to one of the park's most action-packed areas, "Da Vinci's Garden of Inventions." Here, in a formal garden setting, are rides inspired by 15th century Italian art and inventor Leonardo Da Vinci.

The rides of Italy include "The Battering Ram," a scooped out pendulum with ram heads on both ends, a balloon ride for small children and another spinning action-packed ride for the family.

The newest addition is "Da Vinci's Cradle," a ride first developed in Europe, which rocks riders back and forth before taking them over the top in a 360° roll.

Beginning March 31, The Old Country, Virginia's number one paid attraction, will be open on a weekend-only basis until May 11, when daily operation begins. One admission price of $13.95 covers all rides, shows and attractions at The Old Country.

Rising rates at both ends

In the confused jumble of different financing programs available to homebuyers at local savings and loan associations and mortgage companies, adjustable rate mortgages are rising to the top in popularity with both lenders and borrowers.

The transition in borrower preference has taken place roughly since January 1983, and lenders now have a strong audience for adjustable rate mortgages (ARMs) as opposed to 30 year, fixed-rate mortgages.

In fact, 75 percent of all home loans made by savings institutions in January 1984 were adjustable rate mortgages, according to a national survey by the U.S. League of Savings Institutions; while as recently as the first quarter of 1983, ARMs accounted for only a third of the home loans made by savings institutions.

Adjustable rate mortgages are so-called because the interest rate or monthly payment adjusts from time to time to reflect market rate changes. Current rates vary from 10 percent to 14 percent.

"Easily 75 percent of the home loans originated here are adjustable rate mortgages," said Vernon Cook, senior vice president of Mutual Federal Savings and Loan Association. "In a very short period of time, the public has grown to accept these programs."

American TeleServices opens

American TeleServices, the Baltimore-based communications firm, has announced the opening of its new regional headquarters building in Virginia Beach.

Located on a one-acre lot in the Expressway Business Park off Route 44 near the Norfolk-Virginia Beach line, the two-story American TeleServices Building contains a total of 14,000 square feet. American TeleServices will occupy the first floor with a staff of 13 under the direction of Regional Manager Roy Markert. Wade Harris will serve as assistant branch manager. The 6,000-square-foot second floor is currently available for lease, according to leasing agent Mark B. Warlick of Goodman Segar Hogan, Inc.

The $850,000 project is being developed by the Virginia Beach Associates, financed by an Industrial Revenue Bond issued by the city of Virginia Beach and backed by United Virginia Bank. Designed by the Virginia Beach architectural firm of Hargrove, Brockwell Associates, the building features a modern glass exterior, an innovative energy-efficient heating and cooling system and a 50-car parking area.

Many Beachers involved with United Way

A United Way campaign organization consisting entirely of Virginia Beach volunteers will be created to conduct this fall's United Way fund-raising drive in the resort city.

A steering committee headed by former City Councilman Robert H. Callis, Jr. has been appointed by the newly regionalized United Way of South Hampton Roads to select the leadership for the Virginia Beach campaign.

Others who will serve on the steering committee are: Dr. E. E. Brickell, Superintendent of Virginia Beach schools; Thomas J. Broyles, attorney; Robert H. DeFord, president of Liberty Datsun; James N. Fletcher, manager of the Sears Roebuck and Montgomery Ward store; Burton Harrison, president of the Bank of Virginia Beach; Dr. Clarence A. Holland, Virginia Beach State Senator and physician; Sidney S. Kellam, retired businessman; J. Frank Malbon, president of Princess Anne Oil Company and R. Bradshaw Pulley, insurance executive. The appointments were made by Richard F. Barry, III, president and general campaign chairman of the United Way of South Hampton Roads.

Barry said the Four Cities United Way and the Portsmouth Area United Way combined in January to form The United Way of South Hampton Roads. The newly regionalized United Way gives Virginia Beach, Chesapeake, Norfolk, and Portsmouth an equal voice on the charity's executive committee, he said.

"From Virginia Beach's point of view this is an extremely significant development," Callis said. "The United Way is the key mechanism through which the voluntary sector in South Hampton Roads organizes to serve people who need help and to improve the quality of life for everyone. Virginia Beach henceforth will have full representation in defining our needs and constructing and improving programs to meet those needs."

Callis said that as Virginia Beach's influence in the regional United Way has increased so has responsibility for increased financial support. He said, "The best way for Virginia Beach to meet that responsibility is for us to conduct our own fund-raising campaign this fall under the new regional United Way structure."

Callis said the steering committee is conducting discussions which will lead to the appointment of a campaign chairman and vice-chairman for the resort city. The chairman and vice-chairman will build their own campaign organization for the intensive fund-raising effort which will take place from mid-September to the end of October.

Emphasizing the new regional arrangement, United Way offices and professional staff have been established at 4565 Virginia Beach Boulevard across from Pembroke Mall. "This new office provides a physical presence United Way has not previously had in Virginia Beach," Callis said, adding that the office will serve as a headquarters for the fall campaign.

"The people of Virginia Beach have given United Way excellent support in the past," Callis said, adding that the office will believe regionalization will increase that support because the citizens of Virginia Beach will now have ownership in both United Way agency services and in the campaign that supports them."

Barbara Howard, a registered occupational therapist, and "AIDS" for Health Care, announce the formation of Occupational Therapy Services.

For the past 11 years Howard has been the director of occupational therapy at The Therapy Center, formerly Tidewater Rehabilitation Institute. Howard has worked closely with area physicians, clinics and hospitals providing occupational therapy to persons with various physical disabilities.

Occupational Therapy Services will work closely with Aids, Inc. in providing comprehensive services to area residents.

Improving employment opportunities

Employment opportunities in the South Atlantic region, including Virginia Beach, should continue to improve throughout 1984, according to a recent national poll.

More than 3,600

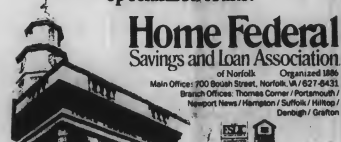

executives responsible for hiring in companies throughout the country participated in the survey conducted by Management Recruiters International, Inc., one of the nation's largest executive recruiters.

A total of 49.2 percent of those polled in the region said they were planning to increase their middle management and/or professional staff during the second quarter of 1984.

Farm, Lawn & Garden

Irrigation system can be installed

The ideal time to install a trickle irrigation system is when the home vegetable garden is being planned.

A system that is properly installed can save water, said a Virginia Tech Extension horticulturist. Using trickle irrigation, the total amount of water for a 1,000-square foot garden will be approximately 57 gallons per day or 399 gallons per week, compared to the recommended 625 gallons per week with the traditional methods.

A trickle irrigation system generally consists of a main line to carry water from the house to the garden. At the garden site, it has a flow valve with adapters to control the amount of water delivered. A black plastic pipe in the garden has thin hoses called emitters attached to carry the water directly to the base of the plants.

"The emitters are most effective when placed under the soil or beneath mulch material," said the specialist, Diane Relf.

The faculty member in Tech's College of Agriculture and Life Sciences listed the advantages of a trickle irrigation system.

— Considerably less water is required to meet the plant's needs for optimum growth when the water is applied directly to the root area.

— Since the plant is never put under water stress, its production is increased, sometimes by as much as 100 percent.

— Since only the soil around the plant roots is wet, the garden remains more accessible.

— Since pathway and non-production area are not being irrigated, fewer weeds are encouraged to grow, and so there is less need for weed control.

— Since foliage is not wetted as often, disease problems will be reduced.

— Water soluble fertilizer can be applied through the trickle irrigation, making the job easier and reducing the chances of fertilizer burn on foliage and stems that can happen when applying fertilizer by sidedressing.

— Since water is applied slowly, there is less strain on the water system, particularly when the home gardener is using a well or spring.

— The system can be automated, so that watering can take place when the home gardener is away.

The specialist also listed the problems that gardeners should be aware of when considering installing it.

— The holes for the hose to the soil are extremely small and particles in some water such as algae, salts and sand, that build up due to evaporation can clog the holes. Chemical treatments or filters may be required to correct these problems.

— Fine textured soils, such as clays, may not absorb water fast enough to prevent ponds and runoff. Sandy soils and medium textured soils are usually best for trickle irrigation.

— Steep slopes may cause 50 percent more water to be applied at the lower end rather than the upper end of the system. Terracing or raised beds can help alleviate this problem.

Gardening newsletter available

Home vegetable gardening starts in the spring, but dedicated gardeners are involved in year-round activities.

"Virginia Gardener" is a monthly newsletter that features information on different activities of gardening. The monthly publication alerts its readers to the chores that need to be done during each month of the year.

It is written specifically for Virginia's climate and is attuned to changes in the weather in different parts of the state, said its editor, Diane Relf, Virginia Tech Extension horticulturist.

Cost for "Virginia Gardener" is $3 a year. To subscribe, send $3 to "Virginia Gardener," Department of Horticulture, Virginia Tech, Blacksburg, Va. 24061.

Two three-credit horticulture courses are being offered during the spring quarter at the Chesapeake Campus of Tidewater Community College.

"Plant Propagation" is a skill-oriented course with an emphasis on propagation techniques using seed, cuttings, grafting, and budding. "Plant Propagation" will meet on Mondays from noon until 3:30 p.m.

"Turf Green Management" will meet on Mondays from 6:20 p.m.

Virginia Beach students participate in Virginia Museum youth program

Two representatives from Virginia Beach recently participated in a special youth residency program called "Three Days in March" at the Virginia Museum of Fine Arts.

They are Monique Travelstead, a senior at Frank W. Cox High School, and James Kevin Baker, a senior at First Colonial High School. Both are 17 years old. Miss Travelstead is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric Berryman of Lynnhaven Road, and Baker is the son of James Walter Baker of Little Neck Road. They were sponsored by the Virginia Beach Arts Center, one of 32 chapters and affiliates of the Virginia Museum.

More than 60 secondary students and educators from across Virginia participated in the annual program this year, spending three days in intense study of the creative options offered by state-of-the-art video equipment. Their prime resource was the latest Artmobile exhibit devised by the Museum, "Illusion: Art and the Moving Image," which began a three-year statewide circuit this season.

"Illusion" traces the history of moving-image art from the earliest cave-paintings and is the most ambitious project in the 30-year history of the Artmobile program, the first in the nation, at the Virginia Museum, said David Pittman, Artmobile program supervisor and also coordinator of "Three Days in March" for the past nine years.

"Illusion" emphasizes the role of the viewer in today's complex world of instant information," said Phyllis Houser, assistant programs director for statewide services.

Gadgets, devices and electronic tricks abound on the Artmobile. The first illusion a visitor sees is one of himself on a closed-circuit TV monitor. Then begins a fascinating trip through the history of moving art as the exhibit explains the basics of film and TV.

"But the most exciting portion of the exhibition is a completely state-of-the-art electronic-art studio in which video-artist-in-residence Robert Walker can create video sketches in each community he visits," said Eileen Mott, education curator for the Artmobile project.

The theme of this year's youth residency program, the same as that of the Artmobile exhibit, "provided the framework for the students to examine and experiment with the latest in video equipment, and we have an impressive sample installed on the Artmobile," Pittman said.

The students and educators began their stay in Richmond by touring the "Illusion" exhibit and then participated in video-taping workshops.

"The influence of television in contemporary society was a major topic for the group," Pittman said. "Discussions focused on the distinction between commercial and non-commercial programming and between active and passive TV viewing."

Also participating in the youth residency program were curator Joanne Ross, who travels with the "Illusion" Artmobile; Stan Woodward, "Illusion" project director; video-artist-in-residence Robert Walker; John Dworak, the Museum's audio-visual specialist; Virginia Commonwealth University communications professor Walter Wright; Lee Montgomery, supervisor of art for Newport News public schools; artist Brian King; VCU art history professor Sue Ann Messner; artist Virginia Quesada; Artist/photographer Anne Savage; and animation director Steve Segal.

Residency program participants were selected by the Museum's chapters and affiliates, and the program was made possible by funds from the Virginia Museum Council, an 800-member volunteer support group, and from the Museum's Annual Giving Campaign.

The Virginia Museum opened its doors in 1936 as the nation's first state-supported arts system, and serves more than a million visitors annually through extensive exhibition and arts education programs at its headquarters in Richmond and in localities throughout the Commonwealth.

Pavilion site for ceremonies

The Pavilion was the site recently for two ceremonies involving veterans.

In the foyer of the Pavilion, Oceana High School graduates gathered to dedicate a plaque for students who served their country during World War II. The "honor roll" plaque contains many longtime Virginia Beach residents who left Oceana High School to serve in the Armed Forces and then returned to graduate. The Pavilion will be the plaques' permanent home.

On 19th Street, across from the Pavilion's marquee, a separate ceremony dedicated a site for a future veteran's memorial. The combined effort of Disabled American Veterans throughout Tidewater Chapter 20 in Virginia Beach has brought about this memorial for "all veterans of all wars." The guest speaker for the site dedication was Representative G. William Whitehurst.

The memorial is expected to be completed in two years. Funds for construction will be raised by veterans from the private sector. The City of Virginia Beach has donated the property for the memorial. For further information contact the Office of Public Information at 427-4111.

and community members who are dedicated unselfishly to the art of theatre.

Meredith is the granddaughter of Mrs. Jane M. Meredith of Virginia Beach.

Juice involved with kidney foundation

Award winning singer Juice Newton, formerly of Virginia Beach, and Mazda dealer Dino Gorssi recently joined 12-year-old Wesley Adam at UCLA's pediatric dialysis unit to kick off the 1984 Mazda/National Kidney Foundation Drawing.

Working together with Mazda dealers throughout Southern California, the National Kidney Foundation of Southern California hopes to raise $50,000 for research and patient care in this year's campaign to help more than 6,000 people who suffer from various kidney diseases. Juice Newton serves as star's spokesperson for the National Kidney Foundation of Southern California. Juice and Wesley on the Service Radio announcement bandwagon.

Virginia Beach residents would not need tickets or volunteer their time to this if Don Hopkins at the National Kidney Foundation of Southern California (213) 62.

300 voices ring in city chorus

Plaza Junior High School recently rang with the voices of over 300 children as the Department of Instructional Service presented the annual All City Elementary and Junior High School teachers' audition fifth, sixth and seventh grade students. The very best vocalists are chosen to participate in the All City Chorus. Each music teacher works with their students for several weeks teaching them the designated songs. All of the students are then united for several rehearsals with their conductor.

This year conducting the fifth and sixth grade chorus was Scott Foxwell, general music specialist at Princess Anne Elementary School. The fifth and sixth graders sang six selections, the last being, "Kids Are People Too." They convinced the audience with enthusiastic singing and accompanying kazoo's.

Accompanying this group by Shied at the piano was Patsy Pitts. The seventh grade chorus, exceeding 150 laying
